POLL OF DELEGATES SHOWS HAMLIN HAS BIG LEAD OVER FOSS

First Choice for Gubernatorial Nomination of 294 Members of Faneuil Hall Convention, As Against 188 for Foss, in First Five Hundred Responses in Canvass Made by the American.

Mr. Foss Takes Out Nomination Papers as a "Democratic Progressive" as a Precaution; Committee of Four Meets Tomorrow to Canvass "Straw Vote" Requested by Macleod

CHARLES S. HAMLIN is the first choice for Governor of 294 out of 529 delegates to the Democratic State Convention. Mr. Hamlin leads Eugene N. Foss by 106 votes. Foss has 188.

A poll of the delegates by the Boston Sunday American indicates that the nominating committee will find the same story in the thousand envelopes piling up for them at the Boston postoffice, and that Mr. Hamlin will probably be declared the nominee to-morrow. The nominating committee has for ten days stood two for Hamlin and two for Foss. Former Senator Fred J. Macleod, chairman of the State committee, has given his word that he will switch to Hamlin if that be the apparent desire of a majority of the delegates.

The American poll was State-wide. Letters were sent out to the 1,058 delegates. At midnight last night more than half of them had responded and this was the result:

	Foss.	Hamlin.	All Others.	Total.
Boston delegates	50	65	14	129
Out-of-town delegates	138	229	33	400
	188	294	47	529

The American sent its letters too the same men who are being polled by the Committee of Four. The Committee of Four will open their letters to-morrow in the presence of newspaper representatives. Their letters are addressed to former Mayor Hayes of Springfield, secretary of the Committee. Mr. Hayes has arranged with Postmaster Mansfield to have all the replies held for him until the Committee is prepared to sit down to the count.

GREAT INTEREST IN OANVASS THROUGHOUT STATE.

Delegates everywhere have responded gladly to the American's inquiry, realizing the keen interest of the entire Commonwealth in the pending ballot.

The American sent two days ago to each of the 1,058 delegates to the Democratic State Convention of October 6 the following letter:

6 the following letter:

The Boston American desires to learn who is the choice for Governor of the majority of the delegates to the Democratic State Convention. Will you please mark a cross against the name of your choice?

Hamlin
Foss
Vahey

and immediately return this blank in enclosed stamped and addressed envelope.

Hamlin Leads Even in Boston.

Delegates in every one of the 33 cities responded to the American's request, and secondary to the poll conducted by this even in the city of Boston.

Outside of the important fact that the American poll indicates that Mr. Hamlin will have a substantial majority of the votes by mail, the Democratic situation, as it has come to be known, was last night as much involved as ever.

Eugene N. Foss had made all the preliminary arrangements for running for Governor on nomination papers as a "Democratic "Progressive." Foss nomination papers, containing about 500 names, were submitted yesterday to the Boston Board of Election Commissioners for certification that the names thereon are the names of legal voters in Boston. Most of the signatures were those of residents of Mr. Lomasney's Ward 8.

Mr. Foss promptly let it be known that he was getting out nomination papers by way of precaution. "I shall not use them," he said to the American," if the will of the majority of the delegates shall prevail."

All May Soon Be Over.

Congressman Foss spoke of "certain statements which have appeared in the press." He appeared to have in mind the declaration attributed to Frederick W. Mansfield, nominee pro tem for Governor, that he (Mansfield) would never retire in Mr. Foss's favor.

If the Foss nomination papers were a surprise there came a greater surprise last night when it was learned that the Cassidy movement for lieutenant-governor was hobbling along on three legs. The Cassidy "movement," it was learned, was quite stationary.

Early in the day the newspapers announced that the Committee of Four—Macleod, Joseph A. Maynard, William P. Hayes and Robert J. Crowley, had decided to run former Senator Thomas F. Cassidy of Adams for second place, and would back his nomination papers.

Whereat there was great rejoicing in all the camps, for Cassidy is popular. He made the Valley nominating speech in the Faneuil Hall convention. Men who have heard them all call Cassidy's the best convention speech delivered around here for years.

When it was discovered last night that nothing was being done about Cassidy for Lieutenant-Governor in this neighborhood, Chairman Macleod was asked how about it. Mr. Macleod replied that he was called up on the telephone earlier in the day by the Hon. William P. Hayes of Springfield, another of the Nominating Four, and was asked by Mr. Hayes to "hold up," for the time being, because Mr. Hayes had discovered that the lieutenant-Governor bee was still buzzing in the neighborhood of Daniel F. Doherty, the big independent whip manufacturer of Westfield, and ought to be attended to at once.

Macleod Still Waiting.

Former Mayor Hayes gave Chairman Macleod to understand, Mr. Macleod said, that he could straighten things out in a little talk with Mr. Doherty. Mr. Macleod had heard nothing further from Mr. Hayes, at 6 o'clock last night, and one hour later decided to go ahead on the Cassidy campaign without waiting another minute.

In the meantime Thomas P. Riley of Malden, who proposes to be a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor to the fitter end, was making headway with nomination papers as a "Democratic Citizens'" candidate. Mr. Riley had filed four papers with the Board of Election Commissioners in the Old Court House. At 6 o'clock two of these signatures had been certified as "good." Mr. Riley must have a grand total of one thousand names.

At the same hour fourteen Foss papers had been brought to the old Court House by lieutenants and sub-lieutenants of the Fitzgerald-Lomasney city democracy. All but one of these papers had been certified by the commissioners, who were then at work on the fourteenth. The number of good names on the Foss papers was reported to be 372. An independent candidate for Governor must have one thousand names.

The Foss papers were filed by Jackie Corcoran of Ward 8, for the most part, and by J. J. Burke, John W. Wood, John D. Flannagan and P. J. McNulty, most Diagram showing how car overturned and whirled completely around.

Scenes of Horror Follow Charles Street Wreck as Men, Women and Children are Hurled Into a Screaming, Wounded Mass.

FOUR men were killed and 53 injured, among the latter many women, when trolley car No. 1206 of the Boston Elevated railroad, packed with people, leaped the track on a sharp curve at Cambridge and Charles streets, West End, at 7:30 o'clock last night, whirled around as though on a pivot, heading in the direction from which it had come, and then crashed over on its side.

The car was Boston-bound from Watertown. Most of the passengers were from Cambridge. Many of them were on their way to the theatre and were in a cheerful frame of mind in anticipation of an evening's pleasure.

In a moment and without any sort of a sign of their impending fate the car swirled from end to end, the front leaping into the air and poising there for a fraction of a second, then toppling over.

A scene that can only be imagined followed. The big car lay on its side. The lights were out. The passengers were hurled into a struggling, hysterical, wounded heap.

FRENZIED MEN AND WOMEN, CAGED IN CAR, FIGHT FOR LIFE

Upon the frenzied mass of battered humanity imprisoned in the black hole of horror fell in a shower that cut like sand from a musket the shattered glass of the windows.

Women shrieked. They fought and scrambled as though for their lives. Men crazed with fright and pain, climbed over their fellow passengers, unmindful of the fact that they were trampling women and children to death. Many were fastened in the inferno they never believed that they would escape alive. Some of these kept their heads and believing themselves hopeless uttered fervent prayers for help.

1,000 People About Wreck.

The accident, one of the most disastrous that ever happened in Boston, happened in Boston's most congested section. In an incredibly short space of time scores of excited citizens reached the scene. The scores multiplied into hundreds and while the cries of the injured still rang in the evening air more than 1,000 people had surrounded the wrecked car.

Into the midst of this saturnalia of excitement and suffering came one blue-coated patrolman with his reason still intact. He elbowed his way to the scene, realizing only that women and children and men were crying for help. He was Patrolman Thomas Foley.

One glance at the overturned car and Foley realized that a grim tragedy lay before him. He dashed to a telephone and called all the ambulances of the city. Then he rang in an alarm of fire. He removed to the car and clambered on top of it.

This had taken only a few minutes. But they were minutes of terror for those inside the car. The street lights threw a glare upon the policeman as he knelt on the top of the overturned car. The cries, the sobs, the moans of the injured.

Cheers the Sufferers.

Striking the windows that still remained whole or partly whole a blow with his nightstick, Foley made an opening. Then he began in a voice that trembled with the keenness of his emotion to try to comfort the sufferers.

"I'm getting to you!" he cried. "I'll get you out! Just wait a moment! Try to be quiet, I'll be there in a moment!"

These were some of the words of cheer that the patrolman uttered. But while he was talking he was working. Reaching down through the windows he caught the hands of one woman and drew her up to

CREW OF MUTINEERS FORCES WELLMAN TO TRY OCEAN FLIGHT

Commander of Great Dirigible Balloon America Is Practically Kidnaped by His Ex-Assistants and Made to Start on Delayed Air Expedition Across the Atlantic.

Chief Engineer and Navigating Officer Take Charge of the Trip, Make All of the Preparations for Departure and Then Summon Wellman Aboard, Thereafter Ignoring All Orders.

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 15.—Walter Wellman, in the great dirigible balloon, America, started at 8 a. m. to-day for Europe. Mr. Wellman, however, did not appear to be in command of the expedition. The matter seemed to have been taken out of his hands by the crew of the American, headed by Chief Engineer Melvin Vaniman, who gave all the orders and acted as Captain.

As a matter of fact, the crew of the balloon mutinied yesterday and told Mr. Wellman that if he did not start within twenty-four hours they would quit. So Wellman started. It might be said that he was kidnaped by his own crew.

From time to time after the America started wireless messages were received here, but not one of them gave the position of the balloon. The fog was very thick and Mr. Wellman sent word that the balloon was headed northeast, but that he was unable to determine his exact position.

FLYING TWENTY MILES AN HOUR.

According to the wireless messages, the balloon was making about twenty miles an hour, the machinery was working well and everybody on board was happy.

The latest wireless message received here to-night said the course had been laid for the north steamer track from Newfoundland, and that the speed had been reduced to fifteen miles an hour to save gasoline. The airship carries enough fuel for fifty days under slow speed.

Late this afternoon the wireless operators were searching the seas to reassure Wellman and his crew aboard the America that the threatened hurricane would not reach them in time to endanger the America.

It is predicted that light, easterly breezes will blow for a time, but brisk westerly winds will prevail off the Grand Banks and over the steamship lane which Wellman expects to follow. The storm which is traveling up the coast, cannot reach the North Atlantic before Tuesday, and then will not be dangerous.

One of the last messages received from Wellman contained thanks to Joseph Saltus, who headed the syndicate which backed Wellman's plan for a flight to Europe.

INSURRECTION FINALLY BECOMES SERIOUS.

The mutiny of the crew last night, which was led at that time by Navigating Officer Murray Simon, did not appear to worry Wellman. He announced that he would start when he was ready and not before. Jean Jason, the motor expert brought over from France to run the engine and his machinist, George Rifland, joined Simon in his rebellion.

The pair of Frenchmen also had claims against Wellman for wages alleged to be due, but they offered to sink their claims for the moment if he would but start.

Wellman stood immovable. At the point the desperados became fierce Vaniman had been loyal to his chief, but when the others of the crew made known their determination, he weakened. He held Wellman in conference the greater part of last night. There is no indication that Wellman agreed to start.

Up at the hangar Simon, Jason and Rifland were glaring at the weather through the half opened doors. At 7 o'clock they decided that the weather conditions were perfect.

Mutineer Summons the Mayor.

Simon did not notify Vaniman or Wellman or any one else directly connected with the expedition. He called on Mayor Stoy, Chief of Police Woodruff and Chief Black of the Fire Department. They had promised the aid of their men in guiding the enormous balloon out of the hangar a work of difficulty, as the margin of safety between the sides of the dirigible and the door was a scant one.

"I'm ready to start," telephoned Simon "Send on your men."

Vaniman had previously been told that Simon was getting the crew out of the blankets. He hurried to the hangar where it was apparent that he was in sympathy with the mutinous navigating officer. The police and firemen were rushed to the scene in patrol wagons and hose carts. Vaniman telephoned a request that they hurry, for at any moment a breeze might spring up which make the launching perilous.

Atlantic city began to wake up. Telephones began to jingle all over town, telling that the balloon was finally ready for the European trip. Most people having been fooled many times, doubted at first.

But soon the streets were filled with persons running, half dressed, in the direction of the balloon shed.

The corridors of the Chalfonte where Wellman has been living, soon resounded with the clamor. Wellman's daughter called out an automobile and soon her father appeared, dressed in a scrupulously accurate aviation costume of khaki. He was rushed to the balloon shed in the auto, his daughter driving.

Wellman is Ignored.

But he had little to say or do when he got there. Half a dozen times he approached Vaniman or someone with suggestions. They stopped for a moment, seemed to listen perfunctorily, and then hurried on. They got all the orders. Wellman gave none of them.

Vaniman was in command of the floor of the hangar. Simon lashed in a boatswain's chair ascended to the top of the shed and cleared the lashings of the big balloon. Wellman added as best he could on the floor.

Finally all was clear. Simon shouted down from the top of the gas bag to Vaniman on the floor below. Before the doors were opened 200 persons seized the great equilibrator, the steel tube which contains 2,000 gallons of gasoline for the engine, and rushed it to the inlet. It was towed into deep water so that it might be quickly attached to the balloon when that craft floated in the air.

At first it was thought that this was to be merely a practice cruise, but Vaniman dispelled that idea. One of the reporters said:

"How far will you go on this trip?"

"By George," said Vaniman, glaring at his questioner, "we won't come back until we have had a try at Europe."

Then the doors were thrown open. The police and firemen seized the hand holds that had been provided. Weighted with ballast as she was the balloon swung them off their feet. The men and women who had hurried down to see the launching were pressed into service.

Out at sea a gray fog stood unmoved by any breath of air. It was 7:30 o'clock when the balloon was finally held ready for the start on the beach. The equilibrator had been attached. Perhaps 1,000

WELLMAN'S BALLOON CREW FORCES HIM TO A FLIGHT

Balloon Soon Out of Sight.

The great fabric sleeve then filled and when Vaniman threw on his clutch. First the smaller motor gave a puff and then the large one, which is exactly as the smaller, began to explode regularly. The America, a cute, gray oblong bag of gas, drifted out toward the sea. The crowd upon the shore stood motionless.

Soon one raised a faint cheer, so even as the yellow wire bound the balloon disappeared above the shrouding fog. For five minutes longer the thrashing of the engines could be heard. Then all was silence.

The start was made at 8:05. At 8:07 the balloon had disappeared. At 8:07 the engines were no longer to be heard, out in the harbor in the Tuna which belongs to Co. Thomas Potter of Philadelphia who is at the point of death at his home in Bar Harbor, Me., could be seen a steadfast silhouette of Wellman and has refused to believe—as all the rest of Atlantic City did that Wellman did not forsake mankind. By the glasses the crew of the yacht aided them so far as they could in the preparations for the departure. They helped in getting the balloon out of the shed and later in providing the equilibrator to it.

Yacht Tows the Balloon.

A line was carried to the car from the yacht and the balloon was towed out to sea. The yacht's crew reported that the engines had steamed quickly, but a few minutes later they had ceased to be heard. Further than that it cannot be expressed in the light that the word used actually bears to make it.

Dense fog off the Jersey coast and the Atlantic City coast has made it impossible to see through the air from the top of the Wellman's car. Wireless messages sent directly communicated the last verdict of confidence felt in his success.

Wireless messages which were picked up here first revealed the trouble with the trailing rope. Then it was sighted, and then it was sighted again. Then it was sighted again. Then it was sighted again.

FRANK GOULD AND EDITH KELLY CROSS SCOTCH BORDER TO MARRY

Real Reason Why New York Millionaire Leases Noted Estate.

Special Cable to Boston Sunday American.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—It was learned today that Frank J. Gould and Edith Kelly, "the Panama Girl" in "Havana," who attempted to be married to England, have been obliged to cross the border line into Scotland to have the ceremony performed.

The regulations of the English Church regarding the remarriage of divorced persons are very strict and Mr. Gould, finding that there was a rigid barrier against the wedding in England, is taking his prospective bride to Scotland, where marriages on the Gretna Green principle are easy and the parties are not annoyed by questions. The ceremony, it is understood, will be performed in Abbotsford, the home of Sir Walter Scott, which has been leased by Mr. Gould.

For the last year there has been a great deal of discussion as to whether Frank Gould had married the slender little dancing girl to whom he has been so attached. She has been known as Mrs. Frank Gould in London and in Paris, where she accompanied him in his recent trip.

Report Starts in London.

Last October, five months after he was divorced by his first wife, who was Miss Helen Kelly, the report that Mr. Gould had married Edith Kelly originated in London. The couple left the Savoy Hotel there for Paris, and immediately after their departure this announcement was made: "Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Gould and suite left the Savoy Hotel today for Paris."

Many of the denials of the rumor of the marriage, but since that time Mr. Gould has been very careful neither to affirm nor deny that he was married. He has been questioned about it innumerable times, but always has laughed the question away or has said flatly that he did not care to discuss the subject. In Paris, where he has passed most of his time for the last year, he has had apartments where the former "Havana" girl was known as Mrs. Gould.

She has appeared with him at the French race tracks and everywhere has passed as his wife. Her gowns have been gorgeous, as befitted the bride of a multimillionaire, and her jewels have been the envy of every woman who saw them. Last January it was reported that Mr. Gould was tired of the notoriety he had gained in this country and intended to leave America for good and become a citizen of France. This report has been revived several times since, but Mr. Gould always has denied it.

However that may be, he has been living in Paris, and last January made his debut as an owner on the French turf. He spent thousands of dollars on a stable, buying the best horses he could get and retaining the services of some famous jockeys. On the day of his debut at Nice he started four horses and two of them won, the other two finishing second and third on their respective races.

At the Spring racing season at Auteuil he was conspicuous and the pretty actress was with him. Her racing costumes were marvels and she was literally bedecked with jewels. They entertained extensively at their apartment in the Rue Victor Hugo and also at their handsome estate at Chantilly.

Last July they spent some time at Aix les Bains, and the jewels of Mrs. Gould as she was known there were among the sights of the place. They were reported at the hotel Splendide and dined on the terrace at the Casino almost every evening. The motley attracted by his companion always seemed to please Mr. Gould.

Gowns Were Marvels.

She was well worth watching, for her gowns were marvelous. We, for both Aix and Aix, despite the famous visitors it has had, never saw the like. One of her favorite adornments was a dog collar of pearls and diamonds. The pearls were set in horizontal rows with large diamond settings of diamonds glittering between them. Below this was a strand of large pearls and lower down still, about the corsage, she wore a wonderful rope of large emeralds, surrounded by diamonds.

The necklace was said to be even more beautiful and costly than the famous rope of Cavalier. Besides the necklace her hands were covered with rings set with diamonds and emeralds, and she wore a number of magnificent bracelets. During their sojourn at Aix Mr. Gould was asked if they were married.

"I don't care to discuss the matter," he said. "There has been too much talk about it already. I suppose people are curious about it, but I don't care to discuss it."

Mr. Gould was in New York last month and remained about two weeks. It was said that he came to make permanent arrangements for the future of his two little daughters who at that time were at the home of their aunt, Miss Helen Gould, at Irvington. Mr. Gould opened his town house at No. 854 Fifth avenue while here but did no entertaining. He was frequently seen in the Wall street district and at the theatres. He returned to Europe on the Mauretania September 22. While here he positively refused to answer questions as to his reported marriage to Miss Kelly.

The news that Mr. Gould had leased Abbotsford was received by cable Friday. It is a beautiful estate at Melrose on the banks of the River Tweed, and was built by Sir Walter Scott, with the proceeds of his novels.

For years the house has been the Mecca of literary pilgrims, for in the original cottage, of which the present house is an elaborate, now written "The Lady of the Lake," "Ivanaoe" and other of Scott's masterpieces.

The house is surrounded by immense grounds, and the place is a veritable museum of relics to the curio-lover. It contains ancient armor and trophies of the chase, ancient furniture presented from old Scottish castles, and Scott's own furniture, including his bed and his dining table.

Miss Edith Kelly.

Find British Law Too Strict to Allow Wedding of Divorced Persons.

Mary Queen of Scots, Rob Roy's purse and gun and other articles intimately associated with Scott's haunts.

All these things, it is assumed, will now be cared for by the new Mrs. Gould, who will occupy the place once filled by Charlotte Margaret Carpenter, the stage struck belle of the great novelist.

Frank Gould has led perhaps the most Trust.

spectacular career of any of the younger New York millionaires. His first wife, Miss Helen Kelly, was a daughter of the late Eugene Kelly, of New York, and they were married at the home of the bride, No. 17 East Thirty-second street, on December 5, 1901, at twenty-four hours' notice. Mr. Gould had been ordered to Europe for his health, he said, and wanted to be married before he went.

Two daughters were born to the Goulds, Helen and Dorothy, and they are now seven and six years old, respectively. After a few years there were reports that the married life of the Goulds was not happy and then came the news that Mrs. Gould had sued for divorce. This was granted in May of last year. During the progress of the suit charges of attempted emasculation of poultry were made against Mrs. Ben Terry and she was sentenced to prison for a year. It was alleged that there was a conspiracy to manufacture evidence against Mr. Gould.

Later in the year came the suit of Bessie DeVole, a dancing girl, against Mr. Gould for $200,000 damages for breach of promise. Miss DeVole exhibited many letters, which, she said, Mr. Gould had written to her, but there have been no developments in the case lately.

Since the divorce there have been many reports that Mr. Gould and his former wife were soon to be remarried, but these were flatly set at rest on July 11 last when Mrs. Gould married Helgo Hill Thomas, assistant treasurer of the Sugar

FOOZLES GOLF BALL: HITS HORNET'S NEST

Perhaps Now You'll Guess Why Mr. Whittemore Lost to Mr. Ouimet.

Parker W. Whittemore, who lives in Newton Highlands, sells automobiles in Boylston street and golfs with the Country Club at Clyde Park, was a golfing out there yesterday, in a match with Francis Ouimet of Woodland, and things looked well for Mr. Whittemore when, in the course of human events, he was playing the tenth hole.

It was noticed by the gallery at this point that Mr. Whittemore's ball lodged beside a nest of powerful belligerent hornets.

Mr. Whittemore gave the superficial material a strong, healthy biff and deliberated wallop.

When they got through picking bodies up it was found that Mr. Whittemore had a large collections of hornets the match was as good as lost to Francis Ouimet of Woodland. The hornets pursued Mr. Whittemore to such an extent that he couldn't play the hole. Ouimet made the gold medal with 78. Whittemore playing in 87.

Late in the afternoon the caretaker at Clyde Park reported that, as nearly as he could learn after a careful investigation, Mr. and Mrs. Hornet and the rest of the Roosevelten family and their friends—were just sitting down to dinner when a hornet was discovered among the beads. Being a pugnacious family, the hornets took it for the larger other and pitched into the first person they met. For the name of this person see above.

FOOTBALL PLAYER FRACTURES VERTEBRA

St. George of Waltham High Continues to Play After Injury in Tackle.

As the result of a strenuous mixup tackling he made in the game with Portland High School, yesterday afternoon, Emmet St. George, junior in the Waltham High School and right end on the school eleven, is suffering from a fractured vertebra at the home of his father, Christopher St. George, No. 496 Main street, Waltham.

The plucky Waltham High player didn't feel any ill effects from the impact, and participated in two rushes that followed. Then he was put out of the game because of his condition. Dr. James P. Lowe examined him and sent him to the Waltham hospital. The photographs with the X-Ray showed a fractured eighth vertebra.

St. George did not lose consciousness. He was taken home. It is said that with quiet and attention his recovery will be rapid.

RUNAWAY AUTO TRUCK.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—A large automobile truck on the Madison avenue side of Ninety-ninth street this afternoon became unmanageable and shot across the sidewalk, smashing the iron railing of an apartment house and landing in an open area. Two babies were asleep in baby carriages in the area below the sidewalk, but escaped unharmed. One of the latter probably will die. The truck was unoccupied and no one was injured. Because of the truck driver's forceful attempt to save the life of her infant charge.

JULIA WARD HOWE IS ILL AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 15.—Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, author of the Battle Hymn of the Republic, and now in her ninety-first year, has been seriously ill at her home in Bellevue avenue, according to reported beginning.

Mrs. Howe lives with her daughter, Mrs. Maud Howe Elliott, in a handsome cottage on Bellevue avenue, and for the past week it was rumored in Newport that her illness was more serious than at first reported to be.

Mrs. Elliott denied the report last night.

Mrs. Howe is not confined to her bed, for tonight she attended a dinner party at the house of Mrs. Edward Burgess, and a few days with a mild attack of grippe, but is up. Her physician, Dr. Edward Cowles, is in attendance, and says there is nothing physician, and no danger.

Mrs. Howe still retains all her mentality and follows modern affairs with the keenest interest. Some days ago she demonstrate how wonderful was the power of her mind, when she delivered a speech on prominent American exponents of woman suffrage and still a prominent part in the thought.

Dr. David Prescott, Mrs. Howe's daughter, left for Bligh Bridge, New Jersey, yesterday morning, but returned to Newport this morning. It is known that Mrs. Howe was in no danger.

FOUR KILLED, 53 INJURED, AS CAR TURNS OVER IN THE WEST END

Happy Theatre-Going Passengers Suddenly Transformed Into Frenzied Mass of Human Beings Fighting for Life in the Darkness.

the top of the car. She was lifted down to the street.

Again he dived down into the car, reaching out for the women first. He lifted them out one after another until he had pulled through the windows to the top of the car more than thirty men and women.

The women were pitiful sights. The rising glass had hacked their faces and hands. The ordinary stains sprinkled their clothing. From their heads their hats had been wrenched as they fought in the semi-darkness for the doors, and their hair was in tatters. The women were wild, some of them that stared with an awful fright.

Heroic Work by Policeman.

But Foley was almost oblivious to these. He directed policemen to carry out the children and lifted many of them through the steel first up through the small opening and then to the car tracks. Some of the children were taken from the car by their mothers.

Two cars headed eastward helped Foley. They were summoned from the Watertown car barn. Foley climbed up on top of the car. Now two forced their way into the car and began to get some of the passengers out through those apertures.

In the meantime the ambulances had begun to roll up. Dr. Cook, who was the first to get out of the car, was followed by Dr. Lacey, who lives at 1 Arsenal street, Watertown. The two physicians hurried to the rear platform of the car. Dr. Cook climbed up on top of the car and began to help the injured to the ground. Dr. Lacey went inside the car and began to help the injured out through the rear door.

The ambulances came from the City Hospital, the Relief Hospital and the Boston Lying-in Hospital on East Boston Heights. Patrol wagons came from Cambridge and the down station. City Point responded up in their wagons.

Many of the injured had been carried into the stores nearby. The people were very kind to the victims. Every one that could do anything was besieged by the storekeepers to do it. Physicians were also summoned to the scene. The police rendered valuable assistance. They did all they could to relieve the suffering crowd.

Man Is Decapitated.

Two men were in the street. They had come out through windows to the car tracks. One of these men was a Mr. Newton. He is thought to be dead. The other man was badly hurt. The latter was John J. Shea of Watertown. He also severely injured.

The bodies of the dead men were covered with sheets and then covered with blankets found in the car. Policeman Ione of Station 3 took the body to the North Grove street morgue. Here he was identified by acquaintances that he had met on the car. Ione was one of the first officers to arrive on the scene. He was assisted by Policeman Sullivan of the same station.

After seven o'clock the crowd began to thin out. Many of the injured had been taken home. Others had gone to the hospitals. Some of the dead had been identified. Life-savers had been found a pocketbook containing $7,000, which the police believe belongs to the owner of the car, Mr. Whitehead.

Police Inspector Morrissey reached the scene some time after the accident. He made careful inquiry about how it happened and took the names of a number of persons who had witnessed the accident. Medical Examiner Magrath was also there.

The wrecking crew of the company reached the scene of the accident at 7:30 o'clock. Superintendent of Buildings Patrick John Lidrell was in charge. Before Medical Examiner Magrath was ready to begin examination of the car Lidrell and Magrath.

The wreckers were forced to wait until the medical examiner had completed his examination. The men was directed trying to get the brake, and he was assisted by C. E. Herod, employed in the testing department of the Elevated.

A policeman was also on the car.

The accident took place at the corner of Overad and Arsenal streets, one of the passengers was then the motorman of the car. He was Frederick Hall, who lives at 1 Hanover street. No one else could be found who could tell how the accident happened. Hall is now awaiting and grappling with the awful darkness, he was transferred to Dover.

Hospital is Besieged.

The news of the tragedy reached Watertown early in the evening. Residents of that place from Boston carried the sad news. Newspaper men searching for facts for the stories also spread the news.

Two rival bands assembled before Foley's house and serenaded the Watertown fireman. They were compelled to march through the police station. The bands then marched to the hospital, the Relief Hospital and the East Boston Hospital. Patrol wagons came from each of the down stations. City Point responded up in their wagons.

Many of the injured had been carried into the stores nearby. The people were very kind to the victims. Every one that could do anything was besieged by the storekeepers to do it. Physicians were also summoned to the scene. The police rendered valuable assistance. They did all they could to relieve the suffering crowd.

Wait All Night for News.

Finally the intense strain of the anxious people grew too much. They could endure the suspense no longer. With a cry of despair and defiance and half sobbing, half cursing, they broke and men swept past the police and rushed into the hospital. The police could not hold them down. The corridor at the end of this is the accident room.

The attendants and doctors ran out of the room. Then the crowd began to find the body of the North Grove street morgue. Here he was identified by acquaintances that he had met on the car. Ione was one of the first officers to arrive on the scene. He was assisted by Policeman Sullivan of the same station.

The tragedy's fate and feeling of pain were seen most clearly shown when Benjamin Mitchell, stepbrother of Motorman Hall, who was in charge of the car, arrived at the hospital. The injured crowd did not know that Hall was the motorman of the car.

Mitchell, a little in the control of his own joy of escape, was told by the police details that resulted in the death of Hall. He found a policeman and asked him about the accident. He was told that Hall was dead. Mitchell fainted in the arms of the police officers.

Mitchell was soon revived and then asked if he was sure that Hall was dead. He was assured that he was. Mitchell then asked to see Motorman Hall.

Strong Man Collapses.

The crowd suddenly grew silent. The doctors looked hard, in the chair of a man of sinking nerves answered. Then he collapsed.

Motorman Hall was then taken to the hospital. Mitchell, who is a strong man, collapsed. He was carried to the hospital. Mitchell was then taken to the hospital. Mitchell was then taken to the hospital. Mitchell was then taken to the hospital.

DOCTORS SAID INCURABLE--RELIEVED BY PE-RU-NA.

Robust and Strong--Splendid Appetite.

Mrs. E. West, 137 Main St., Menasha, Wis., writes:

"I have used Peruna for a number of years and when I say that it is a fine medicine for catarrh and colds, I know what I am talking about.

"I have taken it every Spring and Fall for four years, and I find that it keeps me robust, strong, with splendid appetite, and free from any illness.

"A few years ago it cured me of catarrh of the stomach, which the doctors had pronounced incurable.

"I am very much pleased with Peruna."

Bowels and Stomach.

Miss Mary Jones, 7918 Reynolds Ave., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I can recommend Peruna as a good medicine for chronic catarrh of the bowels and stomach. I have been troubled severely with it for over three years.

"One year ago I began to take Peruna, the wonderful tonic for women, and I noticed a wonderful improvement at once. I took six bottles in succession and I always have it on hand to take some year and then when my cough is bad.

"Words cannot express my praise for your tonic. I weighed only ninety pounds before taking Peruna, now one hundred nineteen pounds."

Catarrh of Internal Organs.

Mrs. H. H. Jackson, R. F. D. 5, Newman, Ga., writes: "I have had catarrh of the internal organs for more than a year. I tried other medicines without any benefit.

"I was persuaded to give Peruna a trial, and the first bottle proved a good send, and after taking ten bottles I have received a permanent cure."

SURVIVOR TELLS OF FRIGHTFUL PANIC IN CAR AFTER THE CRASH

By JOHN O'BRIEN.

No. 398 Arsenal street, Watertown.

The car was fifteen minutes late when we reached the bridge and I think the motorman was making up for lost time. I know we came down the incline pretty fast, so fast I though that the motorman must have lost control. I suddenly felt a most startling sensation. The car seemed to turn completely round and the front part to rear right up in the air. Then it went over on its side with a frightful crash and I found myself under a mass of living people who screamed and squirmed and shouted and groaned. I crawled through one of the windows and got out with some cuts and bruises. A policeman and some other men were pulling people out.

I tried to put on the brake. At first my thought at the time was, that pulling on the brake now to hold her on the curve. Then, suddenly, there was a sickening jolt and the front end of the car seemed to rise into the air. We were spun off our feet as our heads went down. Everything was black. I instinctively ducked my head in my arms and as the car spun about, I thought, We have been blown up. Fast was just the way I felt.

Glass was breaking. We were all in a heap, sawing about in a few swirls for a second, and then as the car turned over on its side we all seemed to be caught into one great mass of arms, legs and heads.

"Everybody Was Yelling."

"Everybody seemed to be yelling about me. We crawled up as best we could. I saw them lifting people out. Then some one helped me through. I felt all shaken to pieces and my head hurt.

I crawled until my friend O'Brien was handed out and then they took us and hurried us to other people. I could see only people I knew on the car were the Oxman girls—I don't know their last names. They live at Arsenal and Arsenal streets, in Watertown. They are about my age. They are two of them.

"I was lucky to get out. I don't know how the accident happened, but I do know that at the time we bounced up into the air we were going at a terrific rate of speed an hour.

"It was a terrible feeling when the car left the tracks. I never want to go through it again. I feel thankful I did not lose my life, as they say others did. But it was. I got some bumps and cuts about the head. Well, I am thankful that I missed the show we were going to all see.

DR. H. O. LACEY TELLS OF TERRIBLE PANIC IN THE CAR

Dr. Henry O. Lacey was seen at the hospital soon after the accident. He said:

"I boarded the car in Cambridge at Arsenal street, not far from my house. The car was well filled when I got on, and more people entered as we neared the city.

"I was reading a paper and a number of other people were also. We did not seem to me to be travelling any more than the usual speed. The car came down the hill and passed over the bridge.

"Then all at once the car struck an curve and started to swing around, it suddenly left the rails and turned over on its side.

"When she turned over I was thrown violently across the aisle and really didn't know what was going on, except that I heard the cries of men, women and children.

"The windows were smashed and the glass fell around us. Everything was in confusion. The women shrieked, and pandemonium. The women shrieked, and there was a general rush for the doors.

"We all crawled about and slowly picked our way out of the wreck.

"I then found that my right leg was pretty badly cut and I guess I was hurt a little with all my weight on it. I don't think it's broken, but I am going to have it examined to be sure, and have it looked over. It was a bad accident, and those who escaped should simply thank their lucky stars."

SEEMED ALMOST LIKE WHIRLING IN CYCLONE'S PATH.

Dominick Rogers, twenty-three, of No. 23 Pleasant street, Watertown, who received cuts on the right cheek and had his right leg torn from his back, said:

"I was sitting about the middle of the car, on the right hand side. The car was travelling at what I would call a pretty rapid rate of speed. She was just bowling along, in second to me.

"It was terribly crowded. All of a sudden it felt as if I were in the centre of a cyclone, being whirled around with terrific force. It was all done so suddenly that I didn't realize anything until it had all passed. It was a double somersault, as I now recall it. I felt as if something had taken me softly into the air and I was whirled and lifted at the same time.

"That was done in a flash. Then the next thing I knew the car had tipped, and there was a crush of people on me and all around me, with screams and cries from the injured. I managed to crawl out through a window. The darkness was like the blackest night. That may have been the result of the shock to my eyes. It was a terrible feeling, almost one of utter helplessness. I never want to go through it again."

NEWSMAN TURNS HIS STORE INTO RELIEF STATION

Barney Brown, proprietor of a newsstand at the corner of Cambridge and Charles streets, where the accident occurred, was an eye witness of the crash and of what followed. He said:

"I was standing on the sidewalk when I heard the crash, and saw the car careening on its side.

"My first idea was to rush to the telephone. I called up police headquarters and hastily notified them. Then I called the Massachusetts General Hospital, and told them to rush the ambulances they could to the spot as there had been a terrible accident.

"Then, in company with F. J. Barry of No. 147 Charles street, a friend of mine, I went over to the car. The scene was awful. There were men and women all together, groaning and some looking as if they were cold in death.

"Barry and I got down to work in a hurry. Others about rescued many of the injured, and bystanders around rushed them over to my store and laid them wherever they found a space. When I went to the store I found that we had taken eleven in from the car, and seven of these were women and two girls, and two were men. They were badly injured, all of them.

Woman's Face Torn Open.

"One of the women seemed to me to be dead. Her face was one mass of blood. One side of her face was torn away.

One of the men had a large wound in his side, from which the blood flowed freely. The scalp on one side of the head of one woman was torn so that her skull was laid bare. All the rest of the dazed bled from mouths and noses. Some had gashes over the forehead, and across their faces.

"With the dead and the dying lying all around on the street and in my store it was like a morgue. It was a most heartrending. People who ran up were touched to the bottom of their souls by what they saw. Incidentally, it was the saddest sight I ever saw.

PATROLMAN GIVES VIVID WORD PICTURE OF THE RESCUE WORK

Patrolman Thomas Foley of Station 2 said:

"I was standing at the corner of Charles and Cambridge streets at the time of the accident. As it happened, I was facing toward the bridge. Standing near me at the time was Patrick Hannan of Hancock place.

"I didn't notice the car particularly as it came down the incline from the bridge and I can't say whether it was going very fast or not. I do not think the accident was the result of excessive speed. It looked to me as though the coupling of the front trucks parted as the car swung around the curve, for the whole body of the car suddenly twirled around as though on a pivot and then toppled over on its side. As it went over the lights were extinguished, followed by the most frightful cries of men and women.

"I was standing by the signal box, for I had just left it. I at once pulled the ambulance call and directing a citizen to ring the fire alarm across the street I ran to the car with Hannan. I knew many people must have been hurt, for when the car fell over on its side the crash could be heard for over a block.

"We helped each other climb up on the side of the car. I used my stick to beat in the glass of the windows. After we had opened two or three we could see the people down in the car trying to crawl out. They were yelling and crying and I thought a number were dead.

"We must have pulled at least thirty people out of the car.

"As soon as we took one out of the window it was like a morgue. Soon as some of the left side of the street they would fall right down in the street. We helped as many as we could of the poor people were aided into nearby stores and then the people down in the car trying to crawl out. They were yelling and crying and I thought a number were dead.

"I could not say what might have caused the accident," he said. "I saw the car coming down and then before I knew it it was over on its side and Hannan and I were on the run toward it. Miss Addy McKenzie, aged fifteen, was badly cut about the left side of the head, and narrowly escaped the loss of her left eye, since the glass cut deeply across the temple. She was on her way to Boston with her mother, through some chance the mother escaped injuries. But Miss McKenzie was carried to the side of the car which struck the ground first.

WITH THE FULL DRESS SEASON at hand it is inconceivable that this should not go down in the annals of Boston retailing as an event without precedent that will stand perhaps for years as a record by which other sales will be judged.

The manufacturer required a large amount of cash on short notice and we were able to consummate a transaction that called for an unlimited outlet, which we have through our four stores in Boston, New York and Chicago.

JEALOUSY IS MOTIVE NOW ASSIGNED FOR HULL KILLING

Chief Reynolds in Statement Says He Believes Man Was Slain in Boston.

FACTS came to the attention of Chief of Police Frank Reynolds of Hull last night which led him to believe that a story of love and jealousy might lie behind the murder of the man whose body was found wrapped in an old quilt and bound with clothesline in the sand on Sunset Beach Point, Hull.

The chief believes that the body is that of Frank Constantine, who disappeared from his home four weeks ago today, saying that he was going to Boston. A number of others who looked at the body in the undertaking rooms yesterday, however, refused to say positively whether or not it is that of the missing man.

Mrs. Constantine refused to go to the undertaking rooms and view the body. Harry Thomas, who boarded in the Constantine family said it was not Constantine.

Chief of Police Reynolds made the following statement late last night:

"I am satisfied that the man whose body was found floating on Hull was murdered in Boston. I am of the belief that the murder was committed in Scollay square, the body was taken out to Beacon harbor in a boat and then thrown overboard. I am absolutely satisfied that the body is that of Frank Constantine of Hull. Mrs. Constantine has not yet appeared to look at the body to see whether or not it is the dead body of her husband. I have received information tonight to the effect that Constantine was in the habit of carrying a roll of money and flashing it in public places. It was also known to have driven money around in the streets. He was familiar with many of the 'I Want' policemen in Boston and often gave money to some of them.

"I believe that there will be an arrest in this case within two or three days from certain developments which I am on a position tonight to state the sources of this information."

One Murder Theory.

Here is one of the theories that was held by some of the policemen who have been working on the case last night:

Constantine knew that Hull was dead. He was hidden there until there was danger of the discovery of his body. Then he was taken out in a boat and thrown overboard into the water.

The man, the victim of jealousy. He may have been killed by a woman and man. Constantine was a big man, and that he was either lying down or sitting when killed is the belief of some.

At present was made to establish positively the identity of the body. It was found impossible. Then only could it be buried in the cemetery on the Isthmus.

The police have no suspect in mind. Should the body be positively identified as that of Constantine, it was said last night, a number of arrests would probably follow immediately.

May Be Italian Feud Victim.

While they are of certain that the body is not that of Constantine, the police last night were also working on a theory that the body may be that of a victim of the Italian feud and battle at T Wharf two weeks ago.

For the purpose of testing every clew that may lead to a solution of the mystery, Chief Reynolds yesterday made a tour of the floating camps in the vicinity of Hull and Hingham. The chief is convinced that the body found on the old quilt found wrapped around the body came from some camp. Inquiries were made, of the crazy quilt order, with no attempt made to place the men in the checks in any order.

Chief Reynolds yesterday cited another clew to support the theory that the body was thrown overboard at Hull. A hook was found in the wire attached to the body. Upon it still remained about a heavy sinker. From this he drew that stone might have been part of the ballast of a boat fishing near shore.

An Autopsy Performed.

An autopsy was performed on the body in the undertaking rooms of G. H. Downing in Main street, Hingham, by Medical Examiner Joseph Lincoln, assisted by Dr. C. A. Derr. At the conclusion of the autopsy, which lasted more than an hour, Medical Examiner Lincoln declared that the man had been murdered.

G. H. Downing said that in his opinion the man had been killed about three weeks ago, but that his body had not been put in the water until about a week ago. He said his experience taught him that after carefully examining the body and noting its condition. He said it clearly indicated that it had been in the water but a short time.

Attempts had been made to dismember the body after the crime had been committed, but the trunk was nearly severed, probably with an axe, and other parts of notably the limbs and head, were partially severed.

Stonecutter Finds Body.

The body was discovered by a stonecutter, Herbert Spaulding, lying on the rocks on the east side of Sunset Point. It was done up in a quilt bound with rope and gauge telephone wire and tightly across the upper part of the back pulled around the shoulders and tied with three strands, which bolted that wire. The wire was rude and in good condition. There was found a piece of clothesline bag, fastened from behind the left ear to the shoulder, and two others, one of which is believed to have severed the spine, disclosed the manner in which death was caused.

Lay Church Cornerstone.

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 15.—The cornerstone for an edifice to be used for the Fourth Baptist Church was laid at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Hope street and Rochambeau avenue. The church was established in 1855 and several years ago sold its old property.

THE EXILED MANUEL AS HE LOOKED WHEN ONLY 8 YEARS OLD

HARVARD MAN ONCE 'PAL' WITH MANUEL

Reginald Townsend Knew Exiled King Well Enough to Knock Tooth Out.

REGINALD M. F. TOWNSEND, Harvard junior son of Laurens Townsend, formerly minister to Portugal, takes a lively interest in the fate of King Manuel. He declared that Portugal became the young Harvard man knew the king as a boy, and a "scrap" with him in the days of royal boyhood left a front tooth, and half a dozen scars on his chin which Townsend was thrown and no doubt knew that he held in the highest esteem the Queen frequently attending him personally.

As a boy Manuel showed a predilection for fighting and was accustomed to usurp his mother's time giving an influence of which followed in his acquaintance with the Prince dancer, Mlle. Ivette.

I knew Manuel for many years during my residence from 1896 to 1900 at the American Legation in Lisbon," said Mr. Townsend yesterday, "and was on a very friendly footing with my self-called boy with golden curls and a front tooth out.

Friends After the Fight.

"I'll always recall that front tooth episode. It was the result of a fight with a boy of my own age.

The only outcome was a scrap and a lively one. The little fistic encounter made us pals.

Manuel was a keen lover of outdoor sports. He played tennis remarkably well. He rode with great skill. He was especially fond of bull fighting, the national sport of his country. He was a regular attendant at the bull ring. It should be recalled in this connection that bull fighting in Portugal has none of the brutal features that characterizes it in Spain. The horns of the animals are cut off and dulled so that there is no danger.

"The King and Queen spent much time at the royal palace at Cintra, about an hour's ride from Lisbon and it was here that Manuel and I played most of the time. The grounds about the palace were magnificent and formed an ideal place for children to play.

"Manuel and I were one day riding our ponies about the grounds when a discussion over the relative speed merits of the beasts arose. We arranged a race over about a quarter mile course on a driveway encircling the palace. The King, himself agreed to judge the winner and promised a coveted new silver-mounted saddle to the one who should first cross the line.

King Carlos Fair Sportsman.

"The best half found us stiff neck and neck, Gradually my shetland, 'Cupid,' drew away, and I seemed an easy winner when about 100 feet from the finish my saddle girth broke and I fell to a heap almost at the feet of the King.

The King insisted upon carrying me into the palace where I lay for about two weeks until convalescent, when I was removed to my own home. Manuel won the saddle, but the King presented me also with one because he said that I had broken my own collar bone in a game race and he hoped that the new one would treat me better. I still have this saddle and value it as one of my most-treasure possessions.

EIGHT SHOCKED BY LIGHTNING BOLT IN DORCHESTER

Four Houses in Harrison Square Station Struck During the Severe Electric Storm.

EIGHT persons were shocked, one of them seriously, cornices were ripped from buildings, plaster was knocked from walls and chimneys were toppled into the street when lightning struck four houses in Beach street in the Harrison square section of Dorchester, during the electric storm last evening.

The houses struck were Nos. 20-28, Nos. 20-22, No. 25 and No. 41 Beach street. The most severely shocked were:

Mrs. Thomas Murch, of No. 41 Beach street, seriously shocked.

Thomas Murch.

Mrs. George McLane, of No. 28 Beach street.

Vincent Tracy, nine years of age, Beach street.

Mrs. George A. McKillop, of No. 22 Beach street.

Mrs. Walter Nelson, of No. 20 Beach street.

Mrs. Charles Maguire, of No. 25 Beach street.

What the Lightning Did.

The lightning first struck the cornice on the front of the roof of No. 20-22, ripping off cornice work, sending two ripping off cornice work, sending two chimneys crashing through the roof and darting down the chimneys and running across the floors, carrying off wide strips of plaster and then according to those who saw it, darted out through the front doors and down the street. Those in the house who saw it, darted out through the front doors and down the street. Those in the two-family house at No. 25, and those in at No. 41, the house next to the corner, were:

The houses at Nos. 20-28 and Nos. 20-22 are two-family houses. In No. 20-22 one family occupies the first floor and the other the second floor. In No. 20-28 the families occupy the first floor. The children, and nearly all of them were in the streets at the time, suffered only from fright. The children had come from the other houses which were struck by the lightning to play with those in the house. It was some time before they could be quieted.

Paralyzed by Shock.

Mrs. Thomas Murch still suffering early this morning from the shock she had received. Both legs were paralyzed.

Mrs. Murch received severe shocks recovered in an hour or two.

Members of the Murch family were either thrown out of bed or from chairs by the terrific jolt of lightning. In all about five houses were struck by lightning, followed the lightning's strike. Many of those in the houses were thrown to the floor by the bricks from the toppling chimneys.

Another of the houses struck was J. G. Young of No. 20 Beach street, was laying in bed when the bolt struck. Mrs. Young, who was sitting in a chair, was thrown to the floor when the lightning flashed by, outside the window. The attack was thrown half way across the room, and was thought to be dead for an hour and a half.

Feels Whole House Tumble.

Mrs. Young says she felt the house tumble. Both legs were paralyzed.

BOSTON WOMEN MAKE TOUR OF THE WORLD UNESCORTED

Mrs. Park, Suffrage Leader, and Miss Willard of Wellesley Are Back From Eventful Trip.

WITHOUT escort, two Boston women have just completed a two years' trip around the world. They are Mrs. Maud Park, secretary of the Boston Equal Suffrage League, a Radcliffe graduate, and Miss Mabel Willard of Wellesley. They say that they have proved that a woman can go anywhere in the world and home, with perfect safety if she carries herself with dignity. However, they have not yet tried Boston Common at night.

Two years ago they sailed from San Francisco, and landing in Japan, they explored the wilderness of China, Korea, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand, Java, Siam, Burma, India, Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Turkey and Russia. Then on through Sweden, Finland, Norway and England, back to Boston. All over the world, and in all circumstances, they received the utmost courtesy and consideration.

Suffrage in Old World.

Mrs. Park being a suffragist, her chief interest in all countries was to study the condition and progress of women all over the world. She found conditions in India much worse than in any other country she visited. The woman's part of the house is called the "zenana," and the absolute seclusion to which the men keep their wives and households, is called "behind the purdah," or curtain. Not only are the men very jealous and afraid to trust their women, but the women have no confidence in themselves.

Mrs. Park tells a story of a native official who was ordered to Paris on government duty. He had already married a dressmaker, and was a liberal sort of a man, anyway, so being very fond of his wife, he decided to take her with him. When he asked her if she wanted to go, she was very much confused, and said she would have to consult her uncle who had been her guardian, and had arranged her marriage in the first place. The uncle refused to decide for her, but insisted that she must choose for herself. He did, however, lay the case before her, and remind her of the worst conditions she might find.

"Remember," he told her, "that you will be subjected to the customs of foreign women. You will have to abandon your veil, and not only that but you will have to appear in the same room with strange men without any veil. They will undoubtedly speak to you, and you will have to answer them. Do you think that you could keep yourself a loyal wife and mother when subjected to such temptations?" The woman decided that she dare not trust herself, and stayed behind.

Different in Siam.

In strange contrast with this rigid seclusion of the women are the countries where the women do much of the heavy work. In Burma, Siam and the Philippines, Mrs. Park found women doing the heaviest work; she had women porters to carry her trunks, and she saw gangs of women breaking stones in the road. At the side of the road, where these women were working she noticed a little heap, and examining it, discovered half a dozen babies whom their mothers had left there while they worked nearby.

When one of the babies cried, the mother recognizing her little one's voice, would drop her big sledge hammer, and sitting down on the edge of the roadway, would pick up her baby and nurse it, and then, laying it down again, calmly go back to breaking stones.

Mrs. Park was in England this Summer at the time of the great suffrage demonstrations in Hyde Park and Trafalgar Square. The day she arrived in London she asked a London policeman to take her to the suffrage headquarters. He told her how to get there, and then began at once to tell her with the greatest interest and sympathy of a procession which had crossed his route the previous day. He wound up by expressing his belief that the English women surely would get the vote, because they were willing to come out and show unmistakably that they wanted it.

CONGREGATIONALISTS TAKE FORWARD STEP

THE Congregational Council, assembled in Boston during the past week, made a mighty stride forward when it decided to centralize its work by bringing together the National Council and the benevolent societies.

Progress was shown in religious education, the attitude of the church on capital and labor, the interest laymen, boys and women are taking in the work. Congregationalism is no longer a New England product, but a world movement.

The work accomplished during the week has been reviewed for the readers of the Boston Sunday American by the Rev. Dr. Theodore Clifton of Chicago.

By Rev. THEODORE CLIFTON, D. D., Head of the Educational Work in the West.

The Congregational council assembled in Boston during the past week has left this impression upon me, that we have made an advance movement when we accepted the report of the committee of twenty-five, as we did on Saturday in Tremont Temple. This is of great importance to the future of the Congregational church, because it will bring together the national council and the benevolent societies. This means, to the conservation of religious energy. It means centralization of work and gives in a sense of legislative power to the council.

Prepared for New Work.

We are now prepared by this action for better work. We have hitherto been too much separated. We are now brought into consultation with one another. We shall study one another's plans under better advantages. The American Board of Missions will be brought into such close relation with the national council that the outlook for both will be broadened. There will be no attempt to interfere in the least on the part of the national council with the American Board of Missions, an organization which has such an honored history, but they will work together. If the Boston council did nothing else but this, it has justified its existence. This was a great work to get all the societies into a closer relation with one another so that they are studying each other's relations to the council.

I am proud of this action and I know that the great West will look upon it as one of the best moves in this century.

Better Organized.

Now, to-day the Congregational body has better organized. That is one thing accomplished. There have made good progress in religious education. The report submitted to the council plainly shows this. We are going to have the Bible put into all the great universities of the West. We believe that the Congregational Church will head a movement by which the Bible will be considered as literature and that it will be made prominent in all the State institutions. We scorn any attempts to limit the power of the Bible in education.

See what we are doing for religious education which the American Board of Missions has made known all over the world. We have 70,000 pupils in our schools and colleges throughout the world. Think what this means, and this council made evident that we are far ahead of any other denomination in the matter of increasing the facilities of education.

The Labor Problem.

Then the attitude of the council towards the labor problem. What could be fairer and more Christian than the report of the committee upon this subject. The Congregational Church is not dodging the question of labor and capital. It has something to say about them, and what this council did will show the working people that we are interested in their rights and we propose to urge them in our preaching and practicing.

Then the Brotherhood has shown the growing power of the laymen in the church. They are finding something to do. They are no longer contented to let the ministers go ahead and do their work, but they want to have a hand in it, and they are showing their hands. We are glad to have them. No council of our church has made this so apparent as this one for the past few days. We are glad to see the lay men coming forward.

Then, the interest in the boys has been very much in evidence in not a few of the meetings. You have got to look after the boys and make the church and Sunday Schools interesting for them. This has been manifested in many of the gatherings of the council.

Missionary Exhibits.

We have had splendid exhibits in missionary work, in industrial work among all classes ,and work that is being done among sections of this country by the missionaries.

The women have taken a very prominent hold of the council and their usefulness and efficency in the church have been very pronounced in several gatherings. The work of the church to-day would be severely crippled did it not have the active co-operation and support of women. The meetings carried on by the women were a splendid success.

We have been very well treated here in Boston. Everything has been done for our comfort and enjoyment.

I like Boston and all its traditions. I like its narrow streets, its precious memories, its noble institutions, but at this council we have told the world that Congregationalism is no longer a New England product, but a world movement and the council has put us into shape to do a grander work in the West.

COMMITTEE REPORT ON CENTRALIZATION WINS ACCEPTANCE

While the report of the committee of twenty-five recommending centralization was the principal action of the council yesterday, other important steps were taken toward changing the general structure of the church organization.

The regular session of the council opened at Tremont Temple shortly before 9 o'clock. Several committee reports were heard following the opening. The interdenomination church relations committee reported favorably on Christian unity and closer relations with churches of other denominations. This report was followed by that of the committee on evangelistic work. This committee recommended more definite evangelistic work among the churches.

Visit Plymouth Rock.

One of the most important features of the morning session was the appointment of State conferences for the purpose of holding church property. This step was taken at the recommendation of the committee on church property. It means all property in the Congregational Church shall be transferred from its present individual owners to the State conferences.

At this point the report of the committee of twenty-five appointed to investigate and report on the advisability of centralization was called for. President Hazen Sanford reported for the committee, recommending the adoption of ten resolutions prepared by the committee which provided for the centralization of the work of the church in the council.

After two hours' debate the report of the committee was accepted. This was followed by an address on "Centralization" by Parker Fitch of Cambridge on the partnership of the church and the seminary.

The morning session adjourned shortly before noon. Immediately afterward there was an excursion to Plymouth. At Plymouth Rock there were addresses of welcome.

Brotherhood Meets.

While the excursion to Plymouth was taking place there was a meeting of the Congregational Brotherhood at Park Street Church. This meeting was opened at 2 o'clock. Dr. Washington Gladden of Ohio led the general discussion which followed the addresses.

In the evening the national banquet of the council was held in Tremont Temple. Speeches followed the dinner, and an address on "The Battle for Brotherhood" was delivered by Rev. Dr. Samuel Parkes Cadman of New York.

The announcement that the Congregational Council had voted to work for the abolition of child labor and to aid in other reforms advocated by Grand Monopolist the general was received with enthusiasm by members of the various unions about Boston yesterday.

Special meetings with speeches devoted to labor topics have been announced by the Brotherhood Tuesday and during the coming week. Notices of the meetings have been posted at the different labor headquarters and the organizations have endorsed the notices with an appeal for their members to attend.

Abrahams in Pulpit.

The effect of the stand taken by the council in regard to labor is evidenced by the action of Henry Abrahams, secretary of the Central Labor Union, who will occupy the pulpit of the Lynn Congregational Church tonight. He will speak on the subject, "The Church and Labor Unions."

In order that the delegates may be accurately informed on the labor question the Typho Union are furnishing them with literature describing the benefits of trades unionism.

The contest commences to-morrow and closes about December 10. The prizes will be awarded on the 15th.

His Landlady's Advice Probably Saved His Life

I feel that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root saved my life. I inherited weak kidneys. Very often my urine was bloody and the discharge so frequent and painful that I could have to stay in bed to obtain temporary relief. I consulted good physicians but the results were disappointing. My landlady advised me to try Swamp-Root as the last resort, which I did and I was quickly relieved.

I continued taking Swamp-Root and my weight has increased fifty pounds. My health is of the best and I have told many others about Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and have done a lot of good in this way. Your wonderful medicine is of great value to mankind.

Yours very truly,

J. H. BRUXBY,

375 Main St., Pawtucket, R. I.

The above statement made before me I declare to be truthful in every detail.

THOMAS MARSDEN,
Notary Public.

POLL OF DEMOCRATIC DELEGATES SHOWS HAMLIN LEADING FOSS

REPRESENTATIVES OF PARTY TELL HOW THEY STAND

of them Lomassey agents. One paper was brought in by Asa R. Minard. Another was played by Mr. Toye and who is said to be a Medford Republican.

Frederick W. Mansfield, still the only bona fide Democratic candidate for Governor, dropped out into the front of the platform yesterday afternoon long enough to say Mr. Foss two questions. Mr. Mansfield wrote out this interrogatory note and sent it down to Oliver street by messenger:

DEAR SIR:—If your name is not selected by the Committee of Four as the candidate of the Democratic State Convention, is it your intention to run as an independent candidate for Governor?

If no name is selected by the Committee of Four, and I remain as the regular Democratic nominee, will you support my candidacy?

An immediate reply is desired.

Yours respectfully,

(SIGNED) F. W. MANSFIELD.

Foss Replies Himself.

Mr. Foss read the Mansfield letter and gave the messenger boy one long look. "You needn't wait for an answer," he said. "I'll reply to Mansfield."

Early in the afternoon Mr. Foss was quoted as having said that he had absolutely no knowledge of the circulation of independent nomination papers in his behalf. At that time the Ward 8 folks were busy taking names. The work began on Friday.

Some time later Mr. Foss gave out a little statement of his own, in which he "passed up about the nomination papers and had a few words to say about the duty of the French W. Mansfield from the point of view a Eugene N. Foss. This was the Foss statement:

"I have just received a letter from Frederick W. Mansfield, who was made the nominee of the Democratic convention under an agreement that he should retire.

Mr. Mansfield's position is one of simple trust to die his resignation.

No Discussion With Mansfield.

He has no concern with the character or merits of the candidates so selected. I have, therefore, no discussion to make with him.

The question of the candidacy has been submitted to a vote by mail of the delegates of the convention, for the purpose of selecting a candidate in accordance with the will of the majority of such delegates. I am prepared to abide by the will of the delegates as expressed to the committee.

In view of certain statements which have appeared in the press I have taken out nomination papers in the name of "Democratic Progressive."

I shall not use such nomination papers if the will of the majority of the delegates shall prevail.

Democrats who read the Foss statement carefully said it could mean only one thing, that Mr. Foss proposed to abide by the result of the vote by mail indicates a preference for him by a majority of the voters by mail.

Clerks in the American office who went over the votes by mail in the American poll found that many of the delegates had not been content with marking a cross against the names of their favorites. Many of them added a sentiment or two. Here are half a dozen of these sentiments selected at random:

"Hamlin Ly All Means."

Hamlin by all means. The only one that can be elected.

I am in favor of Hamlin for Governor and in favor of the committee of four appointed by the convention doing their duty and selecting the candidate without the State committee butting in.

Hamlin next and last.

Hamlin until the ship sinks. Rah, rah, rah! in one voice. Hamlin and Vahey, Crowley's choice and that's good enough for me.

"I think Hamlin can win."

I have been interrupted from City Hall to vote for Foss, but my choice is Mr. Hamlin by all means. This is the only way a vote should be taken. It is a secret and should be productive of a conscientious vote.

"It is very funny that Vahey's name is on this slip. I was for Vahey, but am now for Hamlin."

My choice is Vahey, but as he is not now a candidate I voted to-day for Hamlin."

Statement by Mansfield.

One man returned his American vote in one of the official envelopes used by Senator Lodge in sending out stuff about "The Tariff and Prices." The delegate wrote this on Mr. Lodge's envelope:

"Using the United States franking privilege to send campaign stuff at the expense of the Government! How's this? Now, I vote for Hamlin. I was for Vahey for first choice."

Frederick W. Mansfield took the trouble yesterday to say again that he has never assumed to talk on politics as a representative of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Mansfield made this statement of his relations with the State Branch:

"The press reports of the Worcester Labor Convention are rather confusing, especially in regard to myself. I have frequently explained that whenever I have spoken on political matters it has always been as an individual and not as officially representing the American Federation of Labor.

"When President Barrett said that I had no authority to use the name of the State Branch and that I had never asked for such authority he was exactly right. I never desired, never asked for and did not have any authority to bind the American Federation of Labor politically.

"The question as to whether or not I am the attorney for the State Branch was not satisfactorily answered. I am the attorney for the Massachusetts State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, and was duly recognized as such at the convention held at Holyoke in October, 1909 (see page 54 of the official report). During the year just passed I have also been the attorney for the State Branch, being unanimously elected by the executive board and being duly notified thereof by the secretary-treasurer, Mr. Dennis D. Driscoll.

"The members of the State Branch know that this statement is true. The fact that I have repeatedly appeared in this capacity before legislative committees and the courts in the last two years without opposition of any authority from any source proves that it is true."

O'BRIEN NOMINATED AGAINST GARDNER

Boston Representative Named for Congress as Lodge's Son-in-Law's Opponent.

Representative William H. O'Brien of Ward 8, Boston, was nominated for Congress at Salem yesterday by the Democrats of the Sixth Massachusetts District. The nomination was by acclamation. Mr. O'Brien will make a vigorous fight through the district, which lies entirely within Essex County and includes twenty-one towns and the cities of Beverly, Gloucester, Haverhill, Newburyport and Salem. Augustus P. Gardner, Senator Lodge's son in law, carried the district two years ago with 22,003 votes to the 7,334 cast for Arthur Worthington of Newburyport, a plurality of 14,750.

It was said in the Sixth District last night that the nomination of Mr. O'Brien was somewhat of a surprise. The Boston American of Thursday, October 6, in a story of the "night before" the Democratic State Convention, told how the Essex County delegation had made it clear to the Democratic leaders that it was his duty to make the fight against Gardner.

"I'm ready," said O'Brien, "if you believes mean what you say. I'll make just fight gladly, and I'll make Captain Gardner sit up and notice that he's been in a scrap."

Republican machinists throughout the State district began to cry aloud last night that this was a trick of the Democratic party in that district had gone away from home to pick a nominee for Congress. Notwithstanding Captain Gardner's reasonably safe lead of 15,000 at the last election, he is bleeding before the first blow was struck.

O'Brien, as a matter of fact, is a native of the district, having been born in Gloucester forty-six years ago. A tele-grapher by profession, he was elected to repleted three terms in the House of Representatives. He has been identified with most of the labor legislation of the last decade and with M. J. Reidy of South Boston was the author of the Massachusetts anti-injunction law. This law, which compels trial by jury in injunction cases, has been cited on every telegram originating and delivered in the Commonwealth.

Yesterday's convention was held in Salem Town Hall at 10 o'clock and a dark Republican looked for the second nomination of Washington Gardner. Democratic leaders knew about the Republican and were enthusiastic for the Gloucester boy. Marcus A. Coffin of Newburyport presided. James J. Welch of Salem was the secretary.

Mr. O'Brien's name was placed before the convention by Patrick Cornish of Manchester. There was no other nomination. It was well known that Mr. Worthington didn't care to run again but wouldn't insist on a draft. The nomination of Mr. O'Brien was made by acclamation.

The nominee is well known in the district, not only in his native city of Gloucester, but in the towns generally. He conducted a Vahey and Foss advertising campaign through Essex County last Fall, travelling in an automobile with a tonneau, distributing thousands of cards and delivering a hundred talks daily.

It is the general belief throughout the county that Captain Gardner will have to make a fight.

PLEADS FOR SINGLE TAX.

Solution of High Price Problem, Says W. Lathrop Meaker.

W. Lathrop Meaker, disciple of Henry George and independent candidate for Congress in the Seventh District, addressed the members of the Massachusetts Single Tax League in Tremont Temple last night. He declared that a single tax was the only logical solution of the high cost of living and that it was suicidal for anyone in the country to keep out of the fight for a single tax. he following officers were elected: President, James L. Garrett; secretary, Edwin F. Clark; treasurer, Comfort A. Adams. President James L. Garrett presided. Among those present were M. O'Neil, Professor Lewis J. Johnson of Harvard College, William Lloyd Garrison, Jr., Arthur H. Bush, Seth H. Howes, G. H. Parker, Henry H. Pierce, John G. Pike, Henry Sterling and S. S. Taber.

O'BRIEN BEATEN BY IRWIN IN CONVENTION

Middlesex Democrats Nominate District Attorney by Vote of Sixty to Five.

The Middlesex County Democratic district attorney convention nearly broke up in a row yesterday at Waltham. After four hours of debate the delegates nominated James J. Irwin for the district attorneyship of Middlesex. Irwin received sixty votes and District Attorney John J. Higgins, Republican nominee, five.

The seventy-seven delegates wrangled from 4 until 8 o'clock over the eligibility of delegates, the question of secret and open ballots, the conduct of the State Democratic convention, and the Lowell convention. At the close, when it was suggested that the nomination of Mr. Irwin be made unanimous those who had voted for Higgins refused to be a party to the courtesy.

The meeting was called to order by Charles F. Daly of Medford in the Democratic headquarters in the Eagle Block at 4 p. m. John L. O'Connor of Everett and Thomas A. Mellor of Waltham were secretaries.

Contest Over Credentials.

The committee on credentials early reported that a full quota of delegates claiming to represent every district were present. But of this number the committee reported that twenty-five had faulty credentials, which it said had not been signed by the proper officials. After a heated debate of an hour at the outset it was accepted.

Michael McNamara of Everett said, "Some of the credentials are lost, strayed or stolen."

Then ex-Mayor Thomas J. Boynton of Everett placed in nomination for district attorney James J. Irwin. John H. O'Connor of Everett seconded the nomination. Irwin was also endorsed by John H. O'Neil and William T. McCarty, both of Somerville.

Then the question of whether the ballot should be open or secret came up.

Boynton moved for the secret ballot as used at the State Convention was held. Boynton was one of the delegates at the most stops ever taken by a Democratic convention.

An open ballot was taken and the vote was 30 to 5 in favor of having the ballot secret. It was not able to have the nomination unanimous, but the motion was lost on the vote of John J. McCarthy.

The county convention, which followed, was over in five minutes.

Irwin was named as the candidate. Those named was: For sheriff, Wilfred S. Tuck of Winchester; county commissioner for three years, Dexter C. Whitman of Concord; county commissioner for two years, Joseph L. Marvin of Lowell; associate county commissioner, Charles A. Fish of Woodbury and Leander T. Collihan of Stoneham.

City Hall Notes

The City Council will have a little junket to-morrow with the Old Colony Street Railway Company as guests. The members will leave Pemberton Square at 9 A. M. for a motor trip to Taunton, New Bedford, Fall River and Providence to inspect the depots of the company's trolley freight system. The trip is made in order that they may have a better understanding how to act on the Boston Elevated petition for a trolley freight franchise.

The Bath Department has bought a White steamer at a cost of $2,800. The department was allowed $5,000 on purchase, the old car of the department, which was condemned, being the 2nd engine, serving as the rest of the purchase price.

The Board of Election Commissioners has certified to the City Council that there are 117,379 males in this city who are eligible for militia duty.

The pay rolls of the Street Department jumped $770 for the week ending October 13 over the same week last year. This was due to increased work in the sanitary division. In the Street, Park and Water Departments the payrolls for the same week amounted to $57,354.08 for this year as against $56,888.64 for the same week last year.

'TED' LEWIS WARMING UP TO STRIKE OUT LAWRENCE

Former Boston Pitcher Plans a Surprise on the First District Diamond.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Oct. 15.—Just when it looked as if the Republican team was about to clean up the diamond of the First Congress district field, the Democrats sent out "Ted" Lewis into the box, and the Republicans are not so sure. Not at all. They get what satisfaction they can out of George H. Lawrence's 7,226 and nod years ago, but—"Ted" Lewis! They don't know what to make of it.

"Ted" Lewis, famous pitcher of the Boston baseball team, dropped out of sight nearly ten years ago. Edward Morgan Lewis took his place. Edward Morgan Lewis, professor of oratory at Williams College.

In the old days, from 1896 to 1900, "Ted" Lewis was one of the star twirlers of the Boston Nationals. In the following year he played in the American League. Then he went to the side dressing room for the last time and "Ted" Lewis was no more.

Edward Morgan Lewis, professor of oratory, lives here on the campus on Main street, across the way from President Garfield. Except for the athletic frame and the step of youth, you would never recognize "Ted" in him. With the same old swing, however, he hikes across the green every day for Griffin Hall and the class in Daniel Webster.

To Talk Tariff Revision.

The Lewises have three children, Edward, William, the first boy born to the class of 1896, Gwendolyn, and John Bascom, the baby.

"I believe," Professor Lewis said last night, "that I shall go around the district and talk to the voters about the tariff. I believe in a real downward revision of the tariff and in the separation of the power of government from the manipulation of the big interests.

"The Republican Party cannot effect a real and proper revision of the tariff, because its men, from the highest to the lowest, have been implicated with the interests by continual contributions from the interests themselves for the party's support.

"Excessive and discriminating tariff rates are the curses the Republican party gives for the financial support it has received. It is impossible for that party to bring about salutary measures without a complete change in the personnel of both houses of the Federal legislature."

Took Up Oratory Early.

Nobody knew until a day or two ago that "Ted"—that is to say, Professor Edward Morgan Lewis—was taking an oratory as early as his first year in the box with the Boston Nationals in 1897, however. Mr. Lewis was lecturer in the Emerson School of Oratory. Later, for several seasons he was enrolled at the Curry School of Expression. In 1906 he became a lecturer at Columbia University and the diamond lost a star.

Wandering "Ted" Lewis's second, and the fact that he has always kept in the pink of condition, he could hardly help but affect the fortunes of the party as a whose.

Mr. Hamlin did not make any speech against the actions of the State committee chairman, who took upon himself to turn that organization into a propaganda center for Mr. Foss.

That the chairman made an unfortunate mistake is now well admitted, and it has in part been responsible for the bitterness which has crept in. Yet, notwithstanding all this, assurances in plenty have come to Mr. Hamlin that his nomination will result in his election.

STATE-WIDE DEMAND FOR HAMLIN, SAY HIS MANAGERS

Issue Statement Reviewing Dignified and Sincere Course Pursued From Start.

THE following statement was sent out by the Charles S. Hamlin campaign managers last night.

"The climaxing of the anti-Hamlin campaign within the last few days in several newspapers, under personal attacks based upon him is a disgruntled politician of perhaps former prominence has made plain that in certain quarters at least the fate of the Democratic party has become incidental to the solitary ambition to have the candidacy of Mr. Hamlin.

"The animus of these attacks was made plain in part by a brief review of his course to date.

"Mr. Hamlin's first public utterance became a candidate at the earnest solicitation of Democratic leaders from all parts of the State was evidently and to get perhaps such a statement from Mr. Hamlin, and very early it was made plain in no uncertain way, how even a Boston call could be had.

Having entered as a candidate, Mr. Hamlin promptly began an appeal to the people of the State, traveling through the various centres, and setting forth not only the nature of the call given him, but the character of the platform on which he was prepared to stand. The responses which he received were genuinely enthusiastic.

First to Release Delegates.

"The night before the State convention Mr. Hamlin released the delegates personally, and at the State convention itself he was present, and at the latter place he was the first candidate in publicly release his delegates as an evidence of his belief in the free ballot, and later, when the fate of the party seemed in danger, he willingly made a surrender of his own hopes and withdrew his name from consideration.

His re-entry into this canvass came as did his original one, by reason of the urging of Democrats of standing, and particularly men outside of office, that he accept it to the party to re-consider, and one of the most insistent was the Hon. James H. Vahey, who declared that under no consideration would he enter the field once.

"When, after the adjournment of the convention without a nomination, the committee of four was formed, Mr. Hamlin accepted most heartily the suggestion of himself on the ballot by the request of certain individuals or party factions.

"The constant aim of Mr. Hamlin and those associated with him in this campaign has been to take the Democratic party of the common enemy with ammunition for the real battle, to which this is only preliminary. There has been no thought that the temptation was strong to reply in like the methods which have been employed. Yet, it has been resisted. Nothing has been said from the Hamlin side which could hardly help but affect the fortunes of the party as a whose.

Mr. Hamlin did make one speech against the actions of the State committee chairman, who took upon himself to turn that organization into a propaganda center for Mr. Foss.

That the chairman made an unfortunate mistake is now well admitted, and it has in part been responsible for the bitterness which has crept in. Yet, notwithstanding all this, assurances in plenty have come to Mr. Hamlin that his nomination will result in his election.

And in the meantime, the Republican spellbinders are sauntering all over the State and telling their audiences what an awful thing it was happened at Faneuil Hall.

Hear ye! Councilman James M. Carley, Democratic nominee for Congress in the Tenth District, speaks at the following places to-morrow night: C street and Broadway, 8 p. m.; 152 Broadway, 8:30; Dorchester street and Broadway, 9; Telegraph and Dorchester streets, 9:30; Andrew square, 10; Mt. Vernon street and Dorchester avenue, 10:30.

It was worth the price of admission to go into the Old Court House while the Foss paper crew were being assaulted by the Election Commissioners yesterday, just to see Martin Lomasney standing around like a wet hen.

They're telling a funny one about Mitch Galvin, the Republican candidate against Carley, and incidentally about Senator Lodge. A good many alleged persons have been "fired" from Senator Lodge's endless Illness at the Stearns Cushing banquet. The latest was Mitch Galvin, while chatting with those around him, asked: "Where's Mitch? Somebody replied: "He wasn't invited." Then Lodge fainted.

Those on the inside are tipping off their friends to watch out for some sparks to fly in the Non-Congressional district within a day or two.

Youd hardly know Tom Riley. His work in the anti-vaccination campaign brought him down to about 200 pounds. Failing to get a job at Foss' ball, as it were.

The boys who have been around Republican State headquarters are not pleased with the delay in the opening of Democratic hostilities. Reason is that the Republican campaign angels think there's enough needed in coming across with contributions.

If Ben Gibbey believed all the inside stories of the campaign that were handed to him at the Bellevue this week his head must be dizzy trying to figure out who's who.

Pity the poor Election Commissioners. All the Boston signatures on these independent nomination papers must be certified by them before filing with the Secretary of State.

Roosevelt made five speeches the other day, and some of the newspapers out West got excited over the fact. Pooh, tush! Look at what Tom Gilbin did.

The Republican campaign managers were so confident of Congressman George W. Norris' inability to run a redskin race without making a fight for it that they have paper trotting him all over the State to make speeches in less solid districts. Even Congressman Norris will do now with Ted Lewis in the field against him.

Of course you are not surprised at the result of the canvass among the Democratic Election Delegates.

Glance over the political calendar for this week, printed in another column of this newspaper, and ask yourself whether or not the Republicans believe they have a good thing in the State election contests this year.

If the folks out in Everett are sites to have an attempt at a "write-in" campaign by the people of the whole State, there isn't one chance in forty millions that Representative Ralph Cavanaugh can be elected for re-election. Cavanaugh is a Republican, and the district is overwhelmingly G. O. P. stronghold. "Would not be a great surprise, however, if Democratic Boston should capture the other seat for the Democrats.

Malden, another supposed Republican stronghold, has sent Thomas P. Riley, a Democrat, to the Legislature for two terms. Another good Democrat, Eugene Gleason, stands an excellent chance of repeating Riley's achievement.

It is not unlikely that Ward 12, Boston, will swell the Democratic membership of the Legislature by one next year. Candidates Murphy and Daly are waging a vigorous campaign.

KELIHER WILL RUN AS AN INDEPENDENT

Lieutenants Actively Circulating Papers in Behalf of the Congressman.

The formal announcement of his candidacy will not be made for a few days, but his lieutenants have been circulating nomination papers in his behalf, and already it is understood that financial aid has been offered to support his candidacy.

There was a movement on foot to give the congressman the Republican nomination to add his independent candidacy, but immediate Republicans in the district said last night that Col. William Oakes will stay in the fight regardless of whether there is a chance for him, and that any move looking toward the withdrawal of the regularly nominated Republican candidate would not be successful.

An officer of the Democratic City Committee said last evening: "I have no doubt that Mr. Keliher will succeed in getting an imposing list of names, but unless without votes don't count. This district is essentially a home rule district and the voters will not stay away from the polls on the part of the voters in other districts to tell the people of the Ninth what they shall do."

Keliher won out once before as an independent candidate. In 1906, when his nomination was made by convention, there was a free-for-all row, and no one of the three candidates for the nomination was chosen, somebody else, Congressman Coury and Keliher, ran as independents, and Keliher won out by a good margin. Keliher has until next Friday night to file his independent papers.

DEADLY ELECTRICAL STORM CAUSES HAVOC IN 2 STATES

One Killed, Five Injured at Worcester, With Great Damage in the City.

RHODE ISLAND HARD HIT

Traffic Tied Up at Fall River and New Bedford; Wires Down All Around.

A terrific electric storm which swept across Rhode Island, Southeastern Massachusetts and the central part of the State caused the death of one man and the serious injury of five others in Worcester the burning of several barns in the Worcester district, completely tied up traffic and business in Fall River, New Bedford and that district and caused considerable wire and tree damage in Rhode Island.

Boston lost for the afternoon of the tempest with a brisk shower early in the evening.

At Worcester Ernest Gustafsen, aged 20, of No. 19 Bancroft street, was struck dead by lightning as he was climbing in the branches of a tree on the Holden road hill. He fell into the arms of his companions under the tree, who were themselves painfully burned about the hands and face by the same bolt.

The weird play of the lightning was depicted on the house and body, representing almost a photograph of boughs and leaves of the tree imprinted into the flesh.

His companions were George H. Hobson, No. 180 Elm street, aged twenty-one years, and Elbert W. Wilcox, aged twenty-seven, of No. 16 Hill street, William C. Howard, aged five of No. 26 Elm street, and Joseph B. Hobson, twenty-three, of Bancroft street, and Peter A. Hoyt, twenty-one, of No. 127 Austin street, Worcester.

Sought Shelter Under Tree.

The young men had been out hunting and, overtaken by the storm, took refuge under the tree into the branches of which young Gustafsen climbed to his death.

The barns burned were those of F. O. Arnold on Quinsigamond avenue, Worcester, valued at $4,000; that of Peter Tessalin of Millbury, worth $2,000, and a barn in use in Grafton.

At Newport the storm was principally felt outside the harbor. A dense mist and heavy fog made navigation dangerous.

Ida Lewis, known as the Grace Darling of America, lit the red light at the Lime Rock light house at nightfall. The storm, it is thought, came in about 9 o'clock for as far as weather conditions ahead of it proceeding to Fall River.

The storm reached Providence at 4.30 p. m. It caught the Penn-Brown football game in the last few minutes of play and drenched the spectators. The rain, falling in torrents for three-quarters of an hour, let up for a spell, only to resume with greater fury. Wires were crossed and six alarms were sounded, calling out the fire department to different quarters, but little or no damage resulted, some of them being false alarms.

At Fall River the gale put the car service to a stop for an hour, started several small fires and destroyed the tower of the Unitarian Methodist church in Tiverton, Rhode Island, in the upper part of the city it was extra violent, leaving that part of the city in comparatively total darkness.

Fire Apparatus Kept Going.

The fire department was kept busy answering a number of calls for small fires which were started in several places at once by the wind very little or no damage.

Lightning entered the home of cotton operator Ben Hall on Pierce street, and although the blaze was extinguished before any damage was done.

The money on a dwelling house on Bedford street was also struck by the lightning and went down the chimney and fused the stove pipe. The fire here was also quickly put out.

Fire in Engine House.

At Somerset, during a thunderbolt nearly killed Chief Engineer of the Somerset Fire department, Mr. Hilliard of Hemlock street, and burned his house to the ground by fire, supposed. Lightning set a slight blaze in the engine house of Engine 2 frightening the horses and causing them almost unmanageable. The blaze in the Hilliard residence occurring shortly afterward.

The storm raged for three hours in New Bedford tearing the streets of Sunday shoppers. Across the Acushnet River in Fairhaven a bolt of lightning entered the kitchen of Frank M. Barrett's house, at No. 374 Adams street, making a wreck of it. In New Bedford another bolt played pranks in the pharmacy of Waters & Woods at the corner of Kempton and Reed streets, breaking a few bottles, but doing harm to none.

RACE TRACK BRIBE EXPOSURE GROWING

Men "Higher Up" May Be Involved in New York Sensation.

NEW YORK Oct 15.—Promises of sensational revelations involving the names of men "higher up" in the bribery scandal brought out by the anti-race track betting bills in Albany were made today by ex-State Senator Otto Foelker. It was on Foelker's testimony that ex-State Senator Frank J. Gardner was indicted yesterday. He declared that Gardner was not the only man who approached him with offers of money during his race track legislation.

Because of the fact that I will probably be called as a witness against Mr. Gardner, and also because the legislative investigating committee," Mr. Foelker said, "I am not at liberty to talk about this case. But if I could do so I should be able to give a sensational story. The offer of Gardner was not the only one that was made to me. I was approached by several other persons whose identities will be revealed before this case is ended."

"Did they offer you money or simply try to persuade you to vote for the race tracks," he was asked.

"I was offered money was his emphatic reply.

Another development to-day was the statement that the books of the Jockey Club may be demanded in the hunt for the man or men "higher up" in the bribery scandal. Officials of the club, including August Belmont, its president, it was said, may be called upon and questioned as to whether or not they know anything of the activity at Albany to defeat the anti-racing bills."

STENOGRAPHER IS HEIR TO $100,000

Springfield Girl Enriched by Court Decision in Land Case in Michigan.

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 15. Miss Helen Houlihan, twenty years old, a stenographer employed by a large business house here has fallen heir to $100,000, her share in an iron mine in Michigan valued at a million, which the Supreme Court of that State has just decided belongs to her mother and five of Miss Houlihan's brothers and sisters.

Miss Houlihan refused to discuss the case today other than admit that she had received a word from her family in Michigan of the court's decision. Her father died when she was an infant and she was sent to Leeds, near Northampton this State, and was graduated from the schools there.

Although the case has been in the courts for over fifteen years, she paid but little attention to it and kept right on at school and earning her own living while her family were in Michigan. Her father was a conductor on a railroad in Wisconsin and purchased some land with a man named Fogarty at Green Bay Wis. cousin.

At his death Mr. Fogarty was named as the executor of his estate and sold the rights in the iron property to Mr. Houlihan. The widow of Mr. Houlihan decided that it had been ill-sold and fought the case in the courts, the decision finally giving her and her children the rights in the property.

At the time of the purchase of the property by Miss Houlihan's father, neither he nor the children knew of the existence of iron, and it was some years before the value of the property became known to them.

The girl has not resumed her position here and declined to say whether she will join her people in Michigan.

The drowning of the young woman had been reported to the police and the police had had time enough to [illegible] the drowning and the finding of the body the information was only a matter of short time.

Cannot Understand Drowning.

"What I cannot understand," said Lyons, "is how I'll could drown in that water by the way it was [illegible] and Sunday morning. [illegible] was as calm as a mill pond. Lyons is an engineer on the Old Colony [illegible] that plies between Boston and Nantasket. He lives at Nantasket. He [illegible] to Boston but night, went to the home of his father and began an investigation.

A policeman from headquarters who made an investigation of the case reported that he was satisfied the girl's death was purely accidental.

Miss Lyons was twenty-eight years old and lived with her father and brothers at No. 28 P street, South Boston. With Thomas McCorry she went out for a ride in the motor boat Gertrude, of which McCorry is caretaker and which is attached to the Boston Yacht Club.

They returned to within fifty feet of the boat landing and moored the motor boat.

The high wind and the choppy sea, however, prevented them from daring to attempt a landing in the small pointer on the motor boat. They waited until about 1:30 o'clock, and as the wind had died down slightly decided to try for the shore.

Miss Lyons was proficient as a strong swimmer and neither she nor her companion feared to make the effort. Miss Lyons stepped into the water first. She placed one hand against the motor boat to prevent a capsizing of the painter and McCorry started to pull out the motor boat lights.

As he did so in the darkness he did not notice that the painter was then partly filled with water. He stepped into the boat and it capsized.

He aided Miss Lyons in keeping afloat and they both called for aid. No one heard their cries. They made a hard fight to reach the steps running from the side of the motor boat. When they reached them both were exhausted. Miss Lyons said, "I'm all right. I've got hold of the steps. You go up and then help me up."

Girl Sinks in Darkness.

McCorry pulled himself to the deck of the boat and then turned to aid Miss Lyons. She had disappeared. Motor [illegible] was rescued from the motor boat by Captain Albert Baker, who was aboard a house boat nearby.

The two men made a report of the drowning to the police. No search was made by the police for the body to-day and when the currents brought it to Carson Beach no one knew of the drowning. It was early morning.

The body was taken to the City Hospital morgue. Medical Examiner [illegible] made an autopsy and returned a certificate of death by drowning. The body was later identified by friends and taken to the home in South Boston. No blame for the unfortunate accident attaches to Lyons' young man.

CHILD PRIMA DONNA ENTHRALLS PARIS IN SPITE OF THE STRIKE CRISIS

At Sixteen Marie Alexandrovicz Achieves Success Unprecedented in Opera Annals.

YOUNGEST OF JULIETS

Aviator Weyman Plans Returning to United States to Fly for Home Fame.

BY VANCE THOMPSON

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—Marie Alexandrovicz, the youngest prima donna who ever appeared on the operatic stage, is the latest marvel to astound Paris. It was only a few days ago that she made her début at the Opera House. It is no exaggeration to say that never before in the history of opera has a singer sold out a house in advance in the middle of the week.

She was called and recalled before the curtain six or seven times. Every critic in Paris is out in full admiration of her triumph. Her voice, the prima donna herself, her costume and willingly admitted about herself, are the talk of the town. Meyerbeer, I am extremely pessimistic—but Gounod and Verdi are dead, and shrieky Wagner is dead, and the Opera is the home of genius. She has just passed her sixteenth birthday. Her voice is a high soprano of wonderful range and quality.

Last night she made her début as Juliet, who looks and acts and is the famous heroine of the tragedy in every particular. Both her interpretation of the part and her acting were the talk of the town. High praise, enthusiasm. Today she is the talk of Paris. While waiting for the artiste to receive me I chatted with a woman who for thirty years has been head dresser at the Opera. She said this was the only time in her recollection that the part had been played by such a very young girl.

Asked if she was not nervous at having to face such a large and critical audience, Maria Alexandrovicz smiled and said:

"Yes, very; but then are not all artists nervous when forced to appear before the public? For myself it is always so and always will be so I fear."

Modest Story of Her Career.

Asked to tell the readers of the Boston American something about herself the young singer shook her head and said:

"There is so very little to tell. I was born in Warsaw. My father was a professor and he taught me to sing when I was quite a little girl. Then we came to Paris. I lived here two years with my mother, studying with Jean de Reszke. Six months ago I made my début as Gilda in 'Rigoletto,' to-night as Juliette, and that is all!"

Then she smiled and took a long breath of relief.

"And very much of a history for your career I am afraid!"

Miss Alexandrovicz did not tell me of her great success in "Rigoletto," nor did she speak of the daring she received in "Romeo et Juliette," but it is, nevertheless, true that her success has been meteoric. She has been subjected to none of the trials usually attend the career of successful artists. Asked what were her favorite roles she replied:

"I can sing the French and Italian works, but I prefer the old operas to the new ones, which I consider very difficult, and which I think lack melody."

Questioned further she said she only practiced one hour and half each day and that she would much like to sing abroad.

And American?" I asked.

"Oh, as for America," she said, "I would very much indeed like to sing there. Indeed, I have had to refuse a splendid offer, owing to my engagement to sing at Covent Garden during the London season. But America will come later on, I hope, for I am told my audiences are very appreciative and sympathetic. But I love France and the French people, for it is I and none but they who received me."

Weyman to Seek Fame in U. S.

Mr. and Mrs. Weyman, the father and mother of the brave young aviator of the Avenue Victor Hugo, are very proud of their son's success, but live in constant fear that an accident may follow one of his daring flights.

Weyman is only twenty years old, and for six he had tried to induce his parents to permit him to take up aviation as a profession. They finally consented, but after the death of Chaves and the accident to the Morgan brothers, his mother heartily wishes she had withheld her consent. Weyman himself says he considers he is safer in a flying machine even in storms weather than driving a fast motor car down a steep hill.

He and Chavez were warm personal friends. He says no one had an idea that Chavez would die. The doctors did not think his wounds serious and consented to a banquet which his friends and admirers had tendered him. Even while his breath was being drunk he was breathing last. The Weymans are Americans wealth and position. They expect soon return to the United States as young man is anxious to make flights in his ive land.

Engagement of Heroine of the Bogus Painting Episode Soon to Be Announced.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Mr. Hamilton Paine has been appointed Duke of Parma by the ex-Empress Eugenie, and it is said that the engagement of the new Duke to Mrs. Paine will be announced shortly.

Mrs. Paine has been chiefly responsible for the ex-Empress' recognition of her husband's claim to the duchy, and it is said that the Empress has been so much impressed by the charms of Mrs. Paine that she has decided to make her husband a duke.

Mrs. Paine has been a prominent figure in London society for the past year, and has been the guest of many of the most exclusive houses. She has been presented at court, and is said to be on the most friendly terms with Queen Alexandra.

Mrs. Paine is a beautiful woman, and is said to be very much in love with her husband. She is a daughter of the late Senator Clark of Montana, and is said to be worth $20,000,000.

BOY SCOUT MOVEMNT GAINS RAPIDLY IN NEW ENGLAND

From Many Sections Come Warm Words of Praise and Able Aid.

A very successful week in the organizing of the American Boy Scout was reported from the towns and cities of New England outside of Boston.

Major Edwin Randolph Short put in several days in New Bedford, where he was most cordially received. The Major's arrival in New Bedford was heralded by the activities of the police there, who insisted on making him a sort of hero. They had paid in the Boston newspapers of late he had served in the world war and had fought with the Rough Riders for thirty-five years, and the wise police force insisted in his finding at least one of the lost children was a member of the Custer regiment.

The Major reports that he had conferences of interesting personality all the clergymen of New Bedford who were unanimous in their approval of the principles of the American Boy Scout. He received a most hearty reception from George Britt, who was the first to enlist him about the business of New Bedford and interested everybody in town who fancies an interest in boy work.

Given Many Invitations.

The Major says that not a little business was spoiled in advance interest for him to accept the invitations to go on to see the Cape. He was in New Bedford three days, and there were no less than three dinners given in his honor. Three times he was called upon to address boys' meetings, and was compelled to do so.

A large hall was crowded to hear the Major address a boys' meeting, and when he left the hall he was followed by the whole audience to the street car. The Major addressed the organization of scoutmasters at the Y. M. C. A. building.

The Boy Scout Troop of No. 7th Company, which was the first to be organized after the Major addressed the meeting, was enrolled while he was there.

Our first troop has been recruited in the Dept. Unit of New Bedford. He has given the Major Wilson to the Major. He will enter the second troop of the Boy Scouts of the Quinn School and will be the first to be enrolled. Major Short's address to the boys of New Bedford will be published in the next issue of the American.

The Major left for Providence, where he will be entertained by the Boy Scouts of that city.

Dr. Anderson's Letter.

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 15, 1910.

Dear Mr. Short: I wish to thank you for your efforts in the matter of trying to get me back home again to see the

I should like to have affiliated with the work, and have had a very good deal of experience in Boy Scout work, and I would be very much interested in the Boy Scout movement. We have a troop here in New Haven, and the Y. M. C. A. has been very much interested in it, and have watched the people in charge of it.

With best wishes,

W. G. ANDERSON.

The National First Aid Association of America, which has for its object the centering work among the boys of the United States, and which has been instrumental in saving hundreds of lives, has offered cooperation with the American Boy Scout.

The offer was made to the officers of the New England Headquarters in Boston by Major Wells, general manager of the association, who stated that the association would be glad to assist in any way possible in the organization which is now being known as the Boy Scout movement. The Major appealed to the officers of the association, and the result of his appeal was that the association will be glad to assist in any way possible in the organization of Boy Scout troops in the United States.

KETCHEL IS DEAD FROM BULLET FIRED BY FARMER

Pugilist Slain at Home of Guest in Quarrel Over a Disc Harrow.

POSSE ON TRAIL OF SLAYER

Angered Farmers, Armed With Shotguns, Search Woods for the Assassin.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Oct. 15.—Stanley Ketchel, middleweight champion of the world, was shot through the right lung at the ranch of R. P. Dickerson, five miles from Conway, Mo., early today. He died at 10 o'clock tonight.

A special train carrying doctors was sent from here by Dickerson, with whom Ketchel has been staying.

Ten bloodhounds were taken to find the trail of a man named Hurtz, who is said to have made the shoot.

A messenger was dispatched as soon as possible to Dickerson, who at once chartered a special train and left for Conway. Ketchel had been spending a week on the farm hunting and fishing. No word of any special trouble had been received by Dickerson.

The bullet entered the left shoulder and ranged downward into the small of the back.

Argument Over a Harrow.

The trouble between Ketchel and Hurtz started at 6:30 a. m., when an argument rose over a disc harrow, which the hired hand had been using. Hurtz had been employed at the farm only since Wednesday and when Ketchel inquired of him about the disc, he is said to have given an surly reply. A row followed. Hurtz secured a rifle and while Ketchel was not looking shot him in the back.

Every effort was made to save the fighter's life, three physicians being rushed to his bedside on a first train after the shooting. But all their efforts were unavailing, the wounded man sinking as the day progressed. After a consultation of the physicians this afternoon it was decided to send Ketchel to Springfield, and a special train was ordered for that purpose. Upon his arrival at the hospital it was seen that little could be done and the life of one of the fairest men who ever entered the ring slowly ebbed away.

Posse Trail Slayer.

Posses with bloodhounds are on the trail of Hurtz, who did the shooting, and should he be captured it is believed he will be lynched before the sheriff and his deputies can arrive.

Before retiring last night Ketchel told Superintendent Bailey of the ranch that Hurtz had reported to him early in the morning that he would not run Dickerson's disc harrow for $20 a month. Ketchel told Bailey that he had become provoked with Hurtz. The latter merely remarking to him that he was not getting enough for his services as far as running a disc harrow was concerned he would not do that at any price.

Ketchel was seated at the breakfast table in the kitchen of the ranch when Hurtz walked in through the rear door of the kitchen and approached the table.

"Throw up your hands!" commanded Hurtz. Ketchel started to get up from the table after replying that he would not do as commanded. As he rose from his chair he turned his back slightly toward Hurtz. The farm hand, who carried a .22 rifle, threw the rifle to his hands, aimed, [illegible] and fired.

The leaden pellet entered Ketchel's back just below the right shoulder. The bullet passed upward about three inches and lodged in the right lung. Ketchel fell to the floor. Superintendent Bailey, who heard the shot, rushed into the kitchen, where he learned that Hurtz had done the shooting. The action of the pugilist was such that it could not pursue the assailant. The door key was taken into one of the rooms and doctors immediately telephoned for. In spite of their efforts Ketchel grew worse, dying at 10 o'clock tonight.

Ketchel Great Fighter.

The rise of Ketchel into the pugilistic limelight was of the spectacular order. His ring career being filled with a series of triumphs until he was forced to leave the ring from the hands of Jack Johnson early this year.

Ketchel, up to the time of his fight with Joe Thomas at Marysville, July 4, 1907, was unknown to Eastern lovers of ring affairs. He was born in Grand Rapids, Mich., September 14, 1886, his father being German and his mother an Irish lady of Polish descent. When seven years old he was employed for a time on one of the lake steamers running between his home town and Duluth. Having no fancy for an occupation, which led his way to Montana, where he punched cattle for a while, then drifted to Alberta and the Pacific Northwest.

From that time on Ketchel went up the line of the middleweights and heavyweights, sending the major portion down for the count with apparent ease before the terrific blows which were in him the title of the "Assassin."

Ketchel went down for the final count without a murmur.

Saved Only By a Fluke.

At the start of the fourth period it looked as though the Army would score again, but the fortunes of war intervened and saved another defeat for Yale. The Army punted to Yale's 20-yard line, where the Blue again fumbled. The Army made five yards through the line, and then attempted a forward pass. Francis caught the ball and rushed it to middies, saving Yale's line from violation.

The Cadets nuffed a punt on their own 25-yard line, and Daly made 8 points for Yale by a field goal. The game ended with the ball in middies.

DARTMOUTH DEFEATS VERMONT ELEVEN BY 33-0 SCORE

Wearers of Green Even Up Old Accounts With the Green Mountain Boys.

FAST GAME THROUGHOUT

Barends Proves Himself a "Phenom" in Booting the Pigskin.

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 15.—Dartmouth evened up old accounts with Vermont to-day when she scored 33 points to Vermont's 0.

It was a fast, clean game throughout, mingled with long exciting runs, clever forward passes, and thrilling tackles.

A touchdown was made in each of the periods and twice in the second period. Ingersoll, Dartmouth's star quarterback, played a brilliant game, making several long runs and distinguishing himself by his accurate passing.

Lovejoy, recently taken from the back field, and placed tackle, loomed up as a crack defensive player and a solid wall of defense.

The kicking of Barends was phenomenal and not once did he miss the goal after the touchdowns. His field goal was from an angle, but it shot clean between the bars.

Barely Misses Field Goal.

In the second period after Ingersoll had made a fair catch on the forty-nine-yard line, Barends tried for a field goal; he slightly misjudged the line, for the ball just grazed the wrong side of the goal post.

Pierce, Vermont's quarterback, played the best game for his side. He was aggressive and tried to urge his team on, but did not succeed in getting them sufficiently started to cope with the speedy Hanover boys. He executed several forward passes some of which netted them good gains.

The game was of the new style and forward passes and onside kicks abounded. Dartmouth tried the pass six times and six failed once, three of them brought the spar enough to able over for touchdowns on the six plays.

Another brought them near enough for Barends to kick the goal.

The game started with Buckmiller kicking off to Daley on the 25-yard line. Ingersoll punted to Mackintosh on the 18-yard line and he ran to the 35-yard line. An exchange of punts on a fair catch brought the ball to Dartmouth's 28-yard line.

A forward pass, Ingersoll to Daley, brought the ball to the 3-yard line and Hoban went over. Barends kicked goal. Score, 7-0. Time, 3:45 in the first quarter.

After a few minutes of play Ingersoll executed a pass to Fletcher, who went over adding five points to the score. Barends kicked goal.

Punts were exchanged and several minutes of play consumed when Buckmiller punted from the 15-yard line and the ball to a Vermont man square in the back and Lovejoy fell on it. Two plays by Hoban brought it over. Barends kicked the goal.

New Style Game Used.

The third period opened with Ingersoll [illegible] Pierce, who brought it to the [illegible] line. A few plays gave Dartmouth the ball and Ingersoll passed to Cutler for a 15-yard line.

Barends put the pigskin between the sticks from 15 of forty yards out, a fine kick. A few minutes after this Vermont crumbled the ball over for 25 yard. The fourth quarter the ball arrived it to the first and Hoban went over.

The fourth period opened with Vermont's ball on the visitors' own 25-yard line. Soon by both sides kept things going until Ingersoll passes to Daley, who went over the line.

Gallegher's Field Goal from 30-Yard Line Beats Wesleyan.

ASHBURNHAM, Oct. 15.—Cushing Academy defeated Wesleyan Academy on Adams Athletic Field to-day by the score of 3 to 0. The game was close and interesting throughout. Wesleyan came near scoring in the first quarter when on Cushing's 2-yard line it had the ball and was unable to score.

Captain May and Stackpole played well for the winners. Stackpole repeatedly breaking through the line and throwing the Wesleyan backs for a loss, while MacKenzie and Lodington played well for the losing team. Four former Dean stars showed up well for Wesleyan, several forward passes being executed by both sides. Smith recovered a punt and ran for about 30 yards, with a clear field but was overtaken from the rear. Gallegher kicked a field goal from the 30-yard line in the last few minutes of play.

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 15.—In a fiercely fought game late afternoon on Andrews Field, the Pennsylvania eleven defeated Brown by a score of 20 to 0, but the score in no way represented the speed at which both elevens worked, the Brown men giving the Philadelphia men a much harder fight than the result would indicate.

The last part of the game was passed in a heavy shower, which drenched spectators and players alike, and practically down to it over to cover.

Pennsylvania could not score at will and every point the secured was made only after a most stubborn fight on the part of the lighter Providence men.

The first part of the contest was particularly exciting and how Condensed Brown holding the visitors safely except for a goal from the field scored by Thayer, who was sent in by Penney for that very purpose.

Brown Battled Hard.

This was made from the 15-yard line after Brown had fought every inch of ground. The heavier men were, however, too touch a proposition for Brown to handle, and the first periods tired the home team to such an extent that they were unable to stop large gains during the three last periods.

The star of the game was Ramsdell who made the greatest gains of any of Penney's backs. Time and time again before through the line or around the end for enormous gains, and made the most brilliant play of the game, a 70-yard run for a touchdown in the third period.

He run out of bounds, however, and the ball was taken to the 20-yard line. From this point it was easy to send over a touchdown.

Old Style Football.

Penn's work was entirely of the old style, depending upon straight old-fashioned football. On the other hand, Brown used the more shifty tactics, relying upon quick plays, well executed and even playing, to make her gains. The forward pass was frequently used, and was a great ground gainer for the Providence team.

The first touchdown made by Penn was secured in a brilliant play that came with much regret as to take the breath away from those who watched it. It was a triple pass, the same play used by the Army against Yale, sending Marks across the line.

The third touchdown was none of a fluke. Stopping behind a punt which rolled behind the goal line, Ramsdell had it on the ground for the second touch down.

At times a punting duel developed as it was seen that McKay, the big Brown halfback, was far the superior of bent, while did the kicking for Penn, and consequently the latter team abandoned this game, preferring to take a chance on line plunges and end plays.

GAME WAS FARCE.

Fort McKinley No Match for Colby Football Team.

WATERVILLE, Me., Oct. 15.—The game between Colby and Fort McKinley this afternoon became a farce after the first period. Colby scored easily, playing a kicking game when held in the least. In the second college team was used in the two periods. Failure to handle the punts and frequently fumbling proved the main faults of the soldiers. The lineup:

TIGERS WIN GREAT FOOTBALL STRUGGLE

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 15.—Princeton and Yale had a tremendous football battle this afternoon before 10,000 people on Palmer Field, the Tigers finally winning by a score of 6 to 3. The two teams were evenly matched throughout the first three-quarters of the game, neither side could score. The Lafayette specialized Princeton's goal several times and the Tigers were on the defensive at the close of the third quarter. Captain Foresman, of Lafayette, one of her players were put out by injuries.

Princeton was then able to get the ball in Lafayette line at three different times, but failed to get for downs, each time the ball was taken to the 20-yard line. From this point it was easy to send over a field goal for Princeton.

Yale got a little of play that [illegible] rolling, and the ground saw a [illegible] time of the first half. [illegible] work was aggressive and during the two quarters the ball was mostly in Princeton's territory. Downs were rare [illegible] ball changed hands frequently. Roland did the kicking for Yale and Hart for Princeton, there being little difference in their effectiveness.

PRINCETON 1914 HELD BY EXETER

EXETER, N. H., Oct. 15.—Exeter and the Henry Princeton freshmen down to a scoreless tie to-day. Although shooting fell at frequent intervals, the playing was of a high order and several long runs were made. The game was a kicking contest in which Fox of Exeter held the better of Sheik of Princeton. As the result of hard coaching during the week Exeter displayed more form this afternoon than it has shown in the past season.

In the first period Princeton punted to the 7-yard line and Exeter punted back to the 30-yard line, where E. Walter returned for 25 yards. Fox [illegible]

If Princeton would score, but Exeter gained the ball, a forward pass, and punted it out of the danger zone.

In the second period Princeton punted and recovered the ball on the 25-yard line and advanced it to the 18-yard line, where an attempt at a goal from the field failed. In the third period, with one minute to play, Dickerman forced his way through center for 10 yards and [illegible] right end for 15 yards more.

Brown Is Cubs' Chief Hope Picks Coombs to Win First

Charles A. Comiskey, the "Old Roman" of Baseball, Expects Athletics' Twirlers to Win World Series.

By CHARLES A. COMISKEY,

This is the second of a series of articles comparing the strength of the Cubs and Athletics written by the veteran magnate of the Chicago White Sox

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—After reviewing the general outcome in the world's series in my initial article yesterday, I will compare the twirling staffs of the two clubs to-day. There is no doubt in my mind that the Athletics have the superior lot of pitchers, and this alone is a big enough advantage to insure the championship to Mack's team.

In the previous series the twirlers have always been a potent factor for the winning team. It was Mathewson's brilliant work against the Athletics in 1905 that gave the Giants the honors. The scores of those games will prove that Bender and Plank did some good work on the mound, but they were simply outclassed by the New Yorker.

In the series between the Sox and Cubs in 1906, my pitchers got the jump on Chance's boxmen and held them in check preventing the Cubs' sluggers from showing their real work with the stick. And it was the same in the battles between the Cubs and Tigers in the next two years. Adams, unexpected great showing won for the Pirates last season.

Praises Athletics' Star Trio.

The twirlers who will bear the brunt of the work for the Cubs and Athletics are all experienced, but judging from the present form the Athletics are going to have an edge. I think Coombs, Bender and Plank are three of the greatest pitchers in the game to-day. Then their style is going to beat the Cubs. The Tigers' weakness was in the box when they met the Cubs, and that is just why Jennings's team proved easy. They did not have a southpaw of Plank's calibre, nor a right-hander like Coombs and Bender.

I think Chance is going to have a hard task before him with his pitchers. When his men are in condition they are undoubtedly good ones, but judging from the way they have been going, they will not be at their best for this series. If the Cubs do win, Miner Brown will have to come to the front and save Chance, but the task seems an impossible one for one man to do.

Overall, Reulbach and Cole have been entirely too erratic for Chance to depend on. With this trio at their best, and if they could help out Brown, the Cubs' chances would be greatly improved, but as conditions now stand we must figure out just how the twirlers are going right now.

A manager would not want to have his hurler going at a better clip than Mack's men. Take almost the entire staff and it has never weakened one bit at any time this year.

Jack Coombs is a glutton for work and he is most effective in a tight game and when runners are on the bases. I really do not know how he gets command of his drop or fast shoot, but in all the games I have seen him pitch the batters have had much trouble in hitting it squarely.

Thinks Coombs Will Win Opener.

The boys of my team all tell me Coombs is a wonder, too. And Jack is a trick twirler. He not only pitches with his arm, but his head as well, and studies the weakness of the batter each time he gets the chance. If Coombs pitches the first game I am confident that he will win for the Athletics.

Chief Bender is known by every one in the game as a star in his department. I place Coombs as Mack's leading flinger, and then rate the tall Indian. The Chief has been in a world's series before and this ought to help him. He frets, the Giants twice and let McGraw's team down with four hits and no runs the first time, and was beaten by Mathewson in the last game, 2 to 0, giving but five hits.

Even should Coombs fail for Mack, there will be Bender to fall back on, and there is a better man in the business. The Indian has perfect control at almost all stages of the game, and I have never seen him weaken when the real test comes.

CLEVELAND TAKES THIRD.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 15.—With a demonstrament of seven hits, one a double off Beebe in the third inning, Cleveland secured six runs and put on ice the third game of the post-season series with Cincinnati.

although luck broke against them in the last two games.

Connie Mack has practically decided to work Coombs in the opening game on Monday, although he has not made any public statement to that effect. Overall is the likely starter in the world's series game for Philadelphia.

Mack is averse to making any predictions on the series next week, but he did announce to the Boston American representative this afternoon.

"I don't care to talke in advance and would prefer to let the result speak for itself," he said. "I know what it has been going for four years and that now I've got the Cubs Going; Athletics Coming.

"On the other hand my boys are coming and will continue to do so for a couple of years yet. All things considered I should tell you that I'm in the best condition I have been in for years. The Athletics have been going good all season and the Cubs were late starting, but it looks like the Athletics will play some ball. Chance has been very much improved and has showed up well this year and the Cubs are warm favorites for the series at odds of 10 to 8.

"I think there is an unexpected influx of local money, however, there will not be enough to cover the Chicago end on Monday.

Manager Chance and his team will arrive here to-morrow evening and will be put up at the Bellevue-Stratford, where the National Commission will also have headquarters.

Great doings are expected here to-morrow, the baseball Writers Association having called a session for there at the same time.

The latter are anxious to know if the National Commission will permit photographers on the playing field and it is expected that a ruling will be made to-morrow evening.

COLORADO E. SMASHES WORLD'S RECORD AT LEXINGTON

Great Son of the Bondsman Sets New Mark for Three-Year Olds.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 15.—Colorado E., the great son of The Bondsman, earned a new world's trotting record today in the closing race of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, when he stepped a mile in 2:04¾, for a three-year-old trotting record, and reduced his own championship mark 1¼ seconds.

Beautiful weather prevailed and the track was in splendid condition when Colorado E. came out for his second and world's record-breaking heat, after he had easily won the opening trip in 2:11¾.

Gus Macey, the grizzled Lexington driver, had his pupil in superb condition for his flight after the new world's three-year-old record, and fleetly trotted the mile from wire to wire.

The closing drive from the head of the stretch home around the wildest seething clamor, and as the long-tailed son of the Bondsman finished here there was a pushing, his mad to and fro around the track indicating great enthusiasm, and a tumultuous greeting.

George Todd, Bon Vivant Ami and Sue D. were also entered in the bid for the chance against the three-year-old trotting king.

Today's races closed the season for the majority of the stables here, and compared steadily few of the horses will make the long trip to Dallas, El Paso and Phoenix.

PLAYS THAT WON GAMES—By Clarke Griffith

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

ALMOST every baseball game is won or lost by one play. I am going to tell you of a number of incidents where [illegible] psychological moment some [illegible] play has saved the day.

[illegible] When he [illegible] The Orioles [illegible] every [illegible] but Baltimore won [illegible] dash [illegible]

It got [illegible] terror [illegible] men [illegible] consid [illegible] simply [illegible] struck [illegible]

[illegible] You're [illegible] And sure enough I struck out the next three. But I was years afterward when we were both in the Jeamesville [illegible] league [illegible] run after two men were out.

I [illegible] a pretty nifty stunt myself one day, even if [illegible] it myself. It was the final game of the [illegible] and I started [illegible] the opposing team [illegible] Northwest League men. Clarke [illegible] afterward in the box [illegible] to bring [illegible] The game had gone four innings, and in the first half of the fourteenth the [illegible] and players managed to hit the bases on me [illegible] had retired a single man.

Clarke was already [illegible] with [illegible] to the coaching [illegible] at the Finals [illegible] Bad [illegible]

You're [illegible] And sure enough I struck out the next three. But I was years afterward when we were both in the big league, before Clarke paid that wager, he was so [illegible]

ONE of the most sensational catches that ever saved a defeat was pulled by Jimmy Slagle, of the Cubs. It was in that famous twenty inning game between the Philadelphia and Chicago clubs which the latter won, 2 to 1.

In the eighteenth inning Magee drove a wicked liner to centre. Slagle had just shoved his hand into his hip pocket to get his chewing tobacco when the ball and the last met. As he started after the sphere he found to his horror that his right hand was caught in his pocket and refused to come out. He gave it a quick jerk, still it refused to budge. But he held on racing with the ball. Finally, in desperation, he threw up his gloved and and through sheer luck the ball stuck in his hand.

It was fully three seconds before he realized that he actually had the ball. Then he pulled out his tobacco, bit off an extra large piece, and wore a Sunny Jim grin.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON pulled off a dandy one against the Cubs a few years back. Crandall had been pitching great ball for the Giants and Chicago was four runs behind when they took their turn at bat in the ninth inning. Like a streak of lightning out of the blue, no unexpected was it, the Cubs began slamming Crandall's delivery all over the grounds. Before McGraw could make a move the Cubs had scored two runs and had a man on the bases. Tenney and Devlin were doing all they could to steady Crandall, but he was getting worse and worse. McGraw sent a C. Q. D. for Mathewson to save the game.

Matty was in the clubhouse taking a shower bath when the messenger rushed in and informed him that he must save the day. He never stopped to dry himself before jumping into his uniform.

In the meantime McGinnity had been sent to the box with instructions to kill as much time as possible. Joe did his best, but finally the first man up caught a wide curve on the nose for a single and another run came in for the Cubs. They were now only one tally to the bad.

Matty realized he had no time to waste, so he dashed madly out of the clubhouse, raced at break-neck speed across the grounds, with shoestrings tangling and untied, and went into the box. There was no time for him to warm up. The umpire refused to let him throw a single ball to the catcher, claiming that twelve minutes had been wasted already.

Del Howard, who was hitting at a .400 clip at the time, was at bat. Matty threw just three balls—all three were his famous sideways—and Howard missed them all. The Giants were saved.

THE Polo Grounds always seemed to be a "jinx" park of Del Howard. In another game between the Giants and Cubs he suffered as badly as when Mathewson fanned him in the pinch. It was a freak play that beat Del and the Cubs this time.

It was in the ninth inning and Chicago needed one run to tie the score. Howard met a fast in-shoot square on the nose. It was a vicious, bounding drive near second base, and Larry Doyle was in front of the ball, with Al Bridwell standing on second to receive the throw and relay to first to complete a double play.

The ball broke through Doyle's hands and struck his shin bone with terrific force. Instead of the error making the Cubs victory easy, it beat them, for the ball, bouncing off Doyle's leg, went straight into Bridwell's hands and resulted in an easy double play.

HERE'S one that was not exactly an exciting play and that did not win a game, but it was exciting enough for Jimmy Austin until he found how it was being worked on him.

When Jimmy first joined the Yankees he was supposed to get a big speed boy for getting down to first on [illegible]. During the morning practice he had the whole infield trying to get him, but nine times out of ten he got away with his little hits.

Now, all men who have the bunt down to perfection never stop to look where the ball goes. The minute their bat meets the ball they dash wildly for first base.

Finally Hal Chase doped out a scheme to beat Austin and his bunt. Before the players left the bench that morning he gave each one of the infielders a hint and told them to put it in their hip pocket.

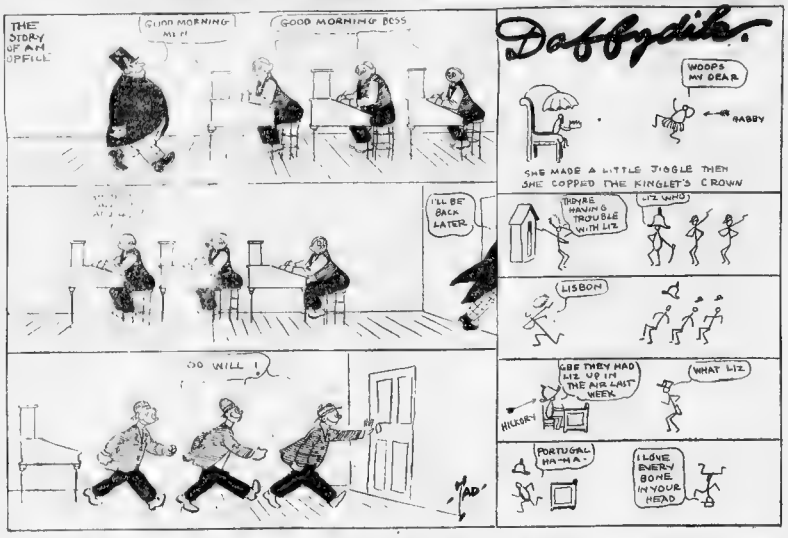
"The minute Austin bunts, the fellow who covers third ball wants to reach into his pocket, grab the ball that and peg it to first and then pick up the one Jimmy hit and stuff it into his pocket," said Chase.

That morning Austin got off the prettiest bunts of his career, but he was always headed off at first. He could not figure how it was. He knew that he was as fast as ever. Finally he decided to stand at the plate the next time he bunted and make no attempt to sprint to first.

He dropped a punky little safe hit down the third base line. Jack Knight was covering the difficult base at the time. Immediately Jack shot the ball in his pocket to Chase, who was covering first base, and then ran in, picked up the bunted ball and started to peg it in his uniform in place of the one he had just heaved to Hal when he noticed that Austin was standing still watching him.

That noon when the players were going home to lunch both Austin and Knight were forced to stand treat for the crowd.

When That World Series Begins—By Tad



BEFORE AND AFTER THE RACES

By "Doc" Stanley

THE record for short service as a horse trainer is undoubtedly held by the veteran "Jack" Bowen. His employer was the eccentric owner, David A. Snell, of New Bedford. Mr. Snell was at Granite State Park Downs, with the stallion Jupe. Mart Demarest, Tom Marsh and John Payne had all served as his trainers only to meet dismissal, when one fine morning at the Dover track the Whaling City horseman approached the veteran Bowen.

"I want you to take Jupe under your wing," said Snell. "I'd give him a mile this morning around 2:30."

"All right," said Jack, and he mounted the sulky. The stallion was in splendid form that morning and Bowen drove him a finely judged trial in 2:19, and beamed with satisfaction as he drew up at the quarter rail.

"I said 2:30," said Mr. Snell, "you are through as my trainer," and the eccentric horseman started in quest of another sulky knight. "Jack" had been the Snell trainer exactly 2 minutes and 19 seconds.

IT was down at the Fair Grounds track at New Orleans a few winters ago, when a 250-pound layer blew into the St. Charles hotel from St. Louis. He was the worst sort of a "butter-in," with never a good word for any of the other layers, and he soon became very "Dutch."

One of the interesting features of New Orleans is the traveling theatrical companies which play upon a barge anchored at the river front, with the stage set upon the main deck, and which move from town to town along the great "Father of Waters."

A bunch of the players of the race track took the St. Louis man down to the water front show one night when an opera company was murdering "The Bohemian Girl" along the levee. After filling him with a fine potion of St. Croix and molasses they bribed the pilot of the theatrical river boat to take him as a passenger after first separating the Mound City sportsman from his money.

When the St. Louis layer awoke the following morning he was at a bayou forty miles down the river, was compelled to walk fifteen miles to a railroad station for a train, and then succeeded in beating it back to New Orleans only by pawning his watch to a roustabout. Three days after he rejoined us at New Orleans, he was cleaned out by a long shot, and he departed for St. Louis with no regrets from the bunch.

Scalpers, Bugs and Moochers---By C. E. Van Loan

Being a Narrative of the Intentions of These Appurtenances of the Great National Game in the Coming World Series

THE ticket speculator says the management of the world series must remove his cloven hoof from the trough this time. Fair enough, say I. The plan advanced in the press sounds like the Square Deal for the Ultimate Consumer and it is time he was getting one. Write your letter to the management and it will be thrown in a pile along with a few thousand similar communications. The reserves will be selected from this heap. All any man ought to ask is an even break.

Nobody knows why so nice gentlemen at the head of amusement enterprises and therefore dependent upon the good will of the common people deliberately slap the meal ticket in the face whenever seats are at a premium. It often happens that before the box office opens the desirable has been turned over to the ticket sharks, bound hand and foot and helpless.

FOR example, here we have old John Doe. John is a fair sort of a sport. He attends two-thirds of the games every season and he never has been known to bone his newspaper friend for a pass. (Possibly this is because he has no newspaper friends, but let that pass.) "The fact remains that he PAYS HIS MONEY. But for John Doe and others of his kind baseball would be a dead card from the box office standpoint.

All right, John Doe is a baseball bug. He eats it, talks it, drinks it, dreams it. He is eaten up with excitement over the post series. He can't afford to miss these games. Is it fair that this fellow, who has paid $40 or $50 during the season, should be turned down in favor of a lot of low-browed, hawk-nosed, dirty-fingered young men who never spent a cent on base ball in their lives and never will? Did anybody ever hear of a ticket speculator paying his way at the box office?

This applies to the theatres as well as elsewhere.

WHILE on the subject of tickets and things, the season is tightening up for the professional moocher. The moocher is the boy who is constitutionally opposed to spending any real money on his amusement. If everybody was like him the theatres would be dark, the ball parks would be cut into town lots and Bat Nelson would have to depend upon his typewriter for a living. Spend any money for amusement? Well, I should say not! Not while he knows a fellow who is the friend of the second cousin of the house manager.

The moocher is a grand piece of work. He began by paying his way like everybody else, but one day somebody slipped him a brace of tickets and thereby made him a regular customer. He'll never buy any more, but he will spend forty dollars' worth of time and some money in running down free admission tickets.

BUG NEVER LOSES INTEREST.

THE bug, however, bless his dear old heart, is very busy. He is working out the batting averages of the Cubs and sizing up the pitching staff of the White Elephants. The bug never loses his interest. Winter makes no difference to him: he has more time in which to hatch his theories and draw his seven-decimal point deductions. The nights are longer.

Some of the 50-cent customers are willing to wait until things have a chance to happen; the bug wants to know beforehand, and no amount of work can stop him; no amount of form tumbling can make the least impression upon his mathematical mind.

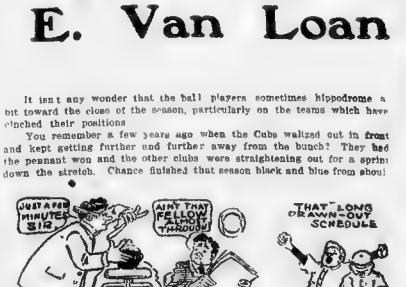
Over in the City of Philadelphia the form-squirrels have it all figured down to a hard-bolted finish. The conservatives are willing to concede that the Cubs may win one game or two at the very outside edge of possibility.

In Chicago the frail mental athletes believe that if Connie Mack gets away with one game out of five he should be made to give it back. The Chicago bugs have already completed the plans and specifications for a four-time licking, and no doubt about it.

NOBODY seemed to care for the lingering schedule of the National League this season. Over in the Unconscious City the Athletics marked time vigorously while the Cubs scraped together the few remaining dollars and finished up a season which had lost its interest along with most of its customers.

It isn't any wonder that the ball players sometimes hippodrome a bit toward the close of the season, particularly on the teams which have clinched their positions.

You remember a few years ago when the Cubs walked out in front and kept getting further and further away from the bunch? They had the pennant won and the other clubs were straightening out for a sprint down the stretch. Chance finished that season black and blue from shoulder to ankle. He stole so many bases that year that infielders came to look upon him as a sort of human thunderbolt.



I was afraid that the boys would lose their pepper before the end of the season," said Chance, "and so I set them an example of playing every game as if we HAD to win it. It was the effect of the example I was after. Every time I got down to first base, I tried to steal second, and I pulled the club along with me and kept them fighting hard long after we were in the clear so far as the pennant was concerned. It was a little rough on me, but I had him on edge for the big series."

SIMPLE truth in an automobile advertisement is as rare as a day in June. Common sense is just as unusual

In automobile advertising the whole list of English superlatives runs riot as a rule. They mean nothing to the average man. Glittering generalities are equally as tiresome. Absurd claims beget nausea.

Truth and common sense will always palliate these evils. We beg to submit them here as follows:

The success of the Mitchell car has been made possible by the Company's attitude towards its patrons.

Nothing else in the world—no amount of clever advertising nor shrewd salesmanship could have accomplished so much for us in such a short time as seven years, as the Mitchell-Make-Good Policy for the owners of Mitchell cars.

Stripped of imagination and theory, egotism and prejudice, that is the simple fact.

To-day the Mitchell-Lewis Motor Company is the soundest and most reliable automobile concern in the world. It has become so, not alone because it makes a good car, but because it has religiously stood behind every car it has made and allowed no man to suffer for something it has failed to do or has done incorrectly.

That Make-Good Policy is the grandest asset this company could have possibly had. It's the biggest thing in the world.

In time, of course, the merits of the Mitchell car would have made it successful in the sure way that quality has. We have no moral right to discuss that now. Our real asset, the one that induced the people to buy the car in the first place, was and is the fact that the public knew and know we make right anything that goes wrong.

It hasn't been a half-hearted policy, a "sales promise" or an "advertising stunt." Ask any owner of a Mitchell car in any part of the civilized world and he will tell you that we have done our part to his entire satisfaction.

Every agent of the Mitchell-Lewis Company has been taught that a patron's acquaintance and claims do not cease with the payment of the purchase price. He has been inoculated with the Mitchell-Lewis belief in moral responsibility. He is not permitted to dodge the issue when it is raised, and if he seeks to do so, he can't sell Mitchell cars.

Our agents are the same to-day as they were seven years ago. This policy has kept them. When Mitchell owners buy new cars they invariably buy Mitchells. This policy has kept them. They feel mighty secure with that bulwork to lean upon, and we therefore have the happiest family of owners that the automobile industry has ever known.

With the factory and agents working hand in hand on such a basis as this, can't you see what a great cumulative force we have had, and can you wonder why the Mitchell has progressed steadily from one year to the other?

We are free to admit that the Mitchell policy has not put much of a burdrn upon us. We have had some little trouble here and there, for we all know that automobiles will go wrong at times no matter how splendidly they may be built. But in every solitary case we have made good whenever requested, and no man that lives, who owns a Mitchell car, can truthfully say that we haven't stood behind him like the Rock of Gibraltar.

Establishment of the Mitchell Service Dept.

We are going even farther. We have recently established what will hereafter be known as the "Mitchell Service Department." It is a development of the Make-Good Policy. At its head we have placed one of the executive officers of our organization. Included within the scope of his work is the repairs department. It is his duty to keep an eye on all Mitchell cars no matter in what remote section of the universe they may be. It is his duty to keep Mitchell owners thoroughly contented. If anything goes wrong with your car come to this department and say in cold English, "This car has gone wrong. Now make it right." There will be no argument. There will be no evasion—no technical shirking of responsibility. We'll go the limit. We believe the Mitchell is now as perfect as skill can make it

The Car For 1911

The cars for 1911 will be practically the same as they were in 1910. There will be some improvements and refinements. Besides they will be fully equipped with top, lamps, tools, horn, jack, magneto and larger tires than heretofore. We are putting more money into the cost of making the car and will therefore have to charge you more. We raise the prices, but not the profit. As a matter of fact the profit is less at the raised prices than it was at the lesser prices. We are giving more for your money.

The Car You Ought to Have at the Price You Ought to Pay. Silent as the Foot of Time.

THE ECONOMY CAR
"Perfectly Simple—Simply Perfect"
Maxwell Model Q-11
4-cyl. 22 H. P.—$900

A PUBLIC test of the Maxwell Car and a horse and buggy on the streets of New York and its suburbs, under actual conditions of traffic, has just been completed.

Automobile, $1\frac{8}{10}$ c.

Expenses stop when not in use

Based on 10-Mile Trip

Gasoline	.122
Oil	.014
Grease	.003
Tires and Car Depreciation	.23
	.369
Cost per mile—two persons	.036
Cost per mile—per person	.018

To operate an automobile the cost is based on gasoline at 20c a gallon; oil, 50c a gallon; grease, 12c a pound; depreciation and tires, .023 a mile; average cost of gasoline per mile, .0122 (figuring 16½ miles to the gallon) and not including storage. The average of 16½ miles to the gallon of gasoline is based on tests of the Maxwell used in the economy test and is extremely low.

It Proves Beyond Dispute

That the automobile is undoubtedly an economy.

That its low cost of operation surprises even its advocates.

That the extravagance of the motor car is voluntary and unnecessary.

That its pleasures are within the reach of men of moderate means.

That it is an indispensable factor in transportation and a utility.

That it is an implement, which if properly employed, will increase the earning power of man, conserve his time, extend his field and support his hands.

That the automobile industry, practically unknown ten years ago, and now the fourth greatest industry in the United States, is fully vindicated and proven economically sound.

That the Maxwell Car is the standard of that industry; the efficient, economical, reliable, utility automobile, as near perfection as human intelligence and human handiwork can make it under modern conditions.

Horse and Buggy, $2\frac{1}{2}$c.

Based on 10-Mile Trip

10 lbs. hay	.008
12 quarts oats	.06
100 lbs straw per month, daily pro rata	.003
Horseshoeing, daily pro rata	.005
Grease, daily pro rata	.002
Depreciation	.074
	.2182
Cost per mile—two persons	.11
Cost per mile per person	.025

Above figures based on hay $21 00 a ton; oats 60c a bushel; straw $1 50 cwt.; horseshoeing, $2 50 per month, grease, 12c a month, depreciation harness and buggy 10% a mile; stabling not included.

Test Officially Sanctioned by the American Automobile Association

We invited the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association to conduct this test in order that it might be in absolutely disinterested control. The Board appointed judges to attest its results.

The two vehicles ran each day over a predetermined route. Each ran continuously for six hours, regarded as a normal day's work. Account was kept of every item of expense entailed. The needs of each vehicle were supplied at roadside stores at current market prices.

Each day a different route was laid out, in order to cover all conditions of city and suburban traffic and all sorts of roads. One day they covered the densely congested districts of the city, another day they ran in infrequently traveled suburban roads. Everything was done to make the test normal, actual, eminently fair and conclusive.

The Results Attested by Its Judges

The automobile cost $^{95}/_{100}$ of a cent per passenger mile to operate.

The horse and buggy cost $1\,^{44}/_{100}$ of a cent per passenger mile.

The car covered $2\frac{1}{2}$ times the distance traveled by the horse.

The car averaged $76\,^{3}/_{10}$ miles at a cost of $1.03.

The horse averaged $32\,^{9}/_{10}$ miles a day at a cost of 95 cents.

The car required $5\frac{1}{2}$ gallons of gasoline and a pint of lubricant daily.

The horse needed 12 quarts of oats and 20 pounds of hay per day.

The other expenses—tire cost, up-keep and depreciation or similar charges, brought the total cost of the car up to $1\,^{8}/_{10}$ cent per passenger mile, as shown in detail in the table above.

The other incident expenses of maintaining a horse and buggy brought its total cost up to $2\frac{1}{2}$ cents per passenger mile, as shown in the table above.

The 1911 models of the MAXWELL CAR are now on exhibition at the Maxwell-Briscoe Motor Co.

Standard Runabout	$900

INCREASED SALES IN CITY GIVE STIMULUS TO REALTY MARKET

Record Beats That of Last Week, Week, Which Was the Best for Months.

BROKERS MORE OPTIMISTIC

Return to the Market of Large Absent Investors and Speculators Enlivens Trading.

By FRANK A. LAVELLE

OVERTOPPING the record of last week with a large increase in sales of properties in both the city proper and the various suburbs about the city, and with many brokers who had been clamoring of dull business now more optimistically inclined, the real estate market the past week can be said to have been one of the best for months.

This increase in sales of city parcels is a good indication of brighter prospects, means a return to the open market of many investors and operators who for a number of months have not been putting through any deals. With prices of many desirable properties on the market a number of investors ready to take up such parcels on the lower end of the scale, series for a quick turnover, there is to result a better market all around.

In the very fine suburban district, as stated, Boston brokers are finding a ready offering to the big demand for properties in their respective localities, indicates a healthy tone in this feature of the market at least. While there has been a slight falling off in the demand for suburban house lots for future homes, as be expected at this time of year, and operators and developers of such property are doing fairly well.

Among the sales reported this week is The purchase by the Boston Consolidated pany of a tract of about [illegible] of land fronting on Lenox street, Dorchester, and Dot Ave., from the Boston & Albany Railroad company. The transfer was made by J. D. Smith and the price named in the deed was $30,000.

In the South End the three and one-half story brick house and lot [illegible] sold at No. 25 Way street, near Dover street, by Lewis parcel was bought by Mrs. Ellen A. Hall, of Milton, and contains 2,400 square feet of land.

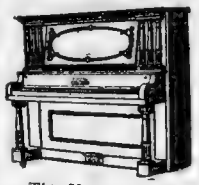
Parent, Are You Doing Your Full Duty Towards Your Child?



This Nice Piano $74

IF YOU DON'T OWN A PIANO IT IS YOUR OWN FAULT

Does your son or daughter ever remark to you that your neighbor Smith's child plays the piano? Hasn't your wife often told you, could not understand how, with a salary double Smith's, she cannot have a piano in her home, and you have always been at a loss to explain how Smith can accomplish so much? I am going to put you wise. Smith has taken advantage of my low prices and my ability to rent the big combination, the Piano Trust, to bring the cost of pianos within his reach. I want you, Dear Reader, to become economical like Smith. I ask you in all fairness to your family to come in this week and see with your own eyes to what levels I have dug piano prices. I have been fighting this big unfair Piano Trust single for 7 years on an up-hill fight. I want your support to continue the fight. Come in this week. I'll give you the facts of your life. Your own terms.

SPECIAL THIS WEEK
I don't want your names now—just your order. During the past month the bankrupt stocks of several small dealers forced to the wall by the Piano Trust have found their way to my store and will be sacrificed at your own price.

Philanthropy Is Just a Crutch

By Herbert Kaufman

The man who expects help doesn't help his expectations. Wishes are not wings—desire is not a lever. Weaklings sink by the gravity of demerit, but the strong do not rise by natural fitness alone.

The perfect engine is only of value when in action—the perfect brain is useless until it is driven by a will. Both must be touched with the spark of initiative.

You won't get along through longing.

There's a mighty lot of sentimentality masquerading in various guises through this battle-royal of a world, but sentiment is scarcer than dodo eggs.

The sinews of success can't be borrowed. You won't really develop with any capital but your own.

You must have within your heart and your mind and your blood, the courage to dare, the vision to plan and the stubbornness to survive.

Philanthropy in any form is only a crutch, and crutches are only for cripples.

You can't run a race or hold a pace with outside support.

Charity not only begins at home, but hates to leave the house.

The most popular stories of man's humanity to man are spread through the pages of fiction.

One of the greatest lies of society is the helping hand. It is generally found at the end of one's own wrist.

But you can't be stopped in your course—you can't be held back so long as you hold your head and your determination.

Only a fool considers money the only necessary tool. Wit is a more important part of the kit. A chest filled with pluck and ambition and perseverance will accomplish far more than a chest of gold.

Every man is his own mint. His ability is the die which stamps out the dollar.

Insistence is a bigger asset than assistance.

Opportunity belongs to no particular time or place. There is always an opening everywhere for the man open to it. If it's worth while, it isn't labeled.

This whole earth is a rich mine. The steady pick strikes a pay streak, but prospecting isn't a quitter's job. If you dig long enough and hard enough at any task, you'll make good.

Every day since the founding of the republic, new sources of revenue have been discovered. But the men who created them were seldom endowed—save with unfailing grit.

The most illustrious names in industry, science, art and the professional vocations, are those of self-driven, self-sustained, and self-encouraged plodders.

The husks of charity do not nurture a man into huskiness.

Giving pauperizes oftener than it fertilizes.

Ideas, ideals and strength must feed upon themselves.

You are the seed and the fruit. You must till yourself into growth.

YANKEE DOODLE DID CONSISTENT WINNER

Mrs. F. P. Kendall of Lexington Has a Very Classy Boston Terrier.

PROBABLY few Boston terriers in the country have created any better impression among dog men than Yankee Doodle 104, owned by Mrs. F. P. Kendall of Lexington, owner of the Kill Kare kennels. Yankee Doodle 104 got a setback at New York last week and also the talent, for this youngster never showed any nerve and was a pronounced favorite before the judging started. He "came back" here however, and in the specials swept the boards.

The dog has been a most consistent winner from his puppy days in about every dog show in the country, and will face the judge in the Boston terrier show here next month ready to take the blues he missed at New York. The Doone, the Boston terrier that took his measure at New York, will also be in the ring, and this contest alone will prove one of the star attractions of the show, as both are hard dogs to beat when they are right.

Theodore Offerman of New York has been elected to judge the French bulldogs at the November show of the French Bulldog Club of New England at Horticultural Hall. Mr. Offerman has judged in New York, although new to Boston, and is one of the best known fanciers in the country of French bulldogs.

Something About Eggs.

Here is a good one:

Dear Sir: An egg laid by a common hen and brought into the store here by a farmer is attracting a great deal of attention. The egg is about the size of the largest double-yolk eggs, except it is very round. This egg could not only stand up like the same large ordinary egg, but when I ordered a dozen egg about the size of a log of wood, this double egg would not stand up. It is about the size of a small ostrich egg, and the shell was hard, but I succeeded in getting the meat out with an ax.

The Silver Wyandotte Club of America has elected the following officers: President, L. Henry Stedman, St. Louis, Mo.; vice president, John C. Dolley, Danvers, Mass.; secretary, treasurer, Waldo H. Dunn, Mount Olive, Illinois; executive committee, Wilhelm Kaup, Guelph, Ont.; Lansburgh, Washington, D. C.; Brown, Rochester, N. Y. The club now has a membership of about 200, and is doing fine work.

French Bull Show.

Dr. Leslie Sullivan brought out a very likely steer at the New York Boston show that took reserve winners, and which was heard around the ringside as Tribmont Countess will, with no petition, properly fest at the 1911 show.

The French bulldog show at Horticultural Hall next month is to be a record breaker in many ways. Already more entries have been offered than for some previous shows, now in the hands of the committee and more on the way. It is the Society of France the leading French bulldog society in the United States and Canada, and French bulldog fanciers the world over are looking forward to the event with much interest. The French bulldog classes of the breed in this country. The French bulldog show is always a society and many prominent ones over from Philadelphia and New York.

Wyandotte Breeders' Meet.

The Columbian Wyandotte Breeders' Association has called a meeting to be held at the Chicago show. They are going to push sports this year, and a good record and constitution and by-laws are to be drafted. Phillip Kochlinger of Watertown is acting secretary and would like to hear from all breeders.

The annual lunch and meeting of the Hemenway Kennel Club at Barre the other week drew out a large number of members and society from Boston Lenox Worcester and Brookline was represented. Miss Hemenway, Miss Dyer of Lenox, Miss Lilly Bird of Walpole, Paul Whitin of Whitinsville, Miss Ruth Gaston, Miss Katherine Shuttleworth of Lenox, Miss Dorothy Bird of Brookline, Miss Ruth Bird of Walpole, Paul Whitin of Whitinsville, Miss Ruth Gaston, Miss Katherine Shuttleworth of Lenox, Miss Dorothy Bird of Brookline, Miss Ruth Bird of Walpole, Paul Whitin of Whitinsville, Miss Ruth Gaston, Miss Katherine Shuttleworth of Lenox, Miss Dorothy Bird of Brookline followed the dog show luncheon on the Barre was held during the afternoon. Two fox dogs entered in the ring, Ky., was the judge.

Leading Feature Was Heavy Selling of Cash Grain and Futures.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—The enormous corn on the farms, especially in the Missouri River territory, will be enormous the coming winter," said John W. Moore, president of the Chicago Live Stock Exchange. "West of Chicago the day every was a failure, and corn cribs are full to overflowing and will go far to feed cattle for the winter. This is true in the major part of Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, South Dakota and Minnesota.

Farmers and ranchmen have forced the country west of the Missouri River to send cattle to market. Since last fall unprecedented numbers have been sent that way. Stockers have been absorbed by the west and will eat corn. All this stock will be fed before it can be sent to market. It will be a great thing and made heavy. The new price of corn stabs freely, and cattle feeding in these districts generally will be very profitable. I also believe that the 1910 corn crop will be used in the Missouri River country. Much of it will be needed there. The Missouri River country is fed from Kansas City, Omaha and Chicago, but I see no reason why the Missouri River country should not be fed from its own corn crop. There is no reason why the Missouri River country should not be fed from its own corn crop.

The big feeders of the country moved early this year. They have been feeding cattle for the past two years and have been feeding them for the past two years. They have been feeding them for the past two years. They have been feeding them for the past two years.

Farmers are holding their corn for higher prices. They have been holding their corn for higher prices. They have been holding their corn for higher prices. They have been holding their corn for higher prices.

Another feature of interest in connection with the corn crop is that the low-cost producing countries have by investments back and forth among one another become practically a part of the corn combination. Naturally the output from these countries will be so handled as to help the general situation. China has from time to time attained and has last week inspiration announced that it also has developed the financing and has developed its treasury. It will be at once the erection of a 5,000 ton mill. This is the last of the big new companies to get itself into shape for actual production. Within eight months the Miami, Ray Consolidated, China and Inspiration will be the backbone of the copper industry.

Erie attracted much attention last week, beginning with its annual report, which showed a full year of net earnings of $2,238,934. This is about half of the gross increase for the year, a result which has been attained by the new management of the unofficial receivers into a whose hands Erie was in over about two years ago. Erie has been rejuvenated, and it is possible that its stock may some day become a fair speculation.

STEEL THE LEADER AS STOCKS RALLY

Official Program for the Week Schedules Reading for Its Partner at Head of the List

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Free selling of stocks by doubting followers of the big people caused a reaction of about a point in the early trading in Wall Street today, but the day closed with stocks buoyant and at new high levels for the movement. Steel was the leader and the official program provides that Reading shall be its partner, at the head of the list next week. The market is being run as scheduled.

Some of the minor lights in Standard Oil are beginning to [illegible] but these minor lights have been known to make mistakes. Perhaps the strangest feature of the present market is this: in addition to the diplomatic reasons for advancing prices, the big people are bullish because they believe the Roosevelt ticket will win in New York at the coming election. It is true the great mass of Wall Street is talking against the Roosevelt ticket, but high financiers always act according to what they believe to be true and not according to what they would like to have true. The chief element of their enthusiasm over a Republican victory is the hope that it will put Senator Root on the supreme bench. They also prefer to have Republicans revise the tariff and the currency system. They are not nearly so badly scared over the prospect of having Roosevelt for a King as they pretend. This statement of the sentimental situation in connection with the stock market is from the highest possible financial source. It is given here as a matter of record.

The bank statement showed a surprising decrease in loans and deposits. The cash increase was just what the street expected and the result was an increase of surplus reserves of $1,474,475.

Announcement by the Steel Trust that its unfilled orders had been reduced 370,000 tons in the month of September was not considered important, in view of the new government policy and in view of the fact that the railroads are piling up unfilled orders for millions of dollars' worth of steel products on the piles in their own offices. It is no longer necessary to put these orders on the books of the steel companies as long in advance as it was a few years ago.

The copper stories show considerable strength and it can be said on the highest authority that there is a disposition to make a broad market for these stocks. New England broke [illegible] piled up with copper stocks and want [illegible] for them. New York is willing. The agreement to restrict production has been put into full operation, as is proved by the large increase in consumption. This, together with the decrease in production, is sure to eat up the surplus rapidly and cause an advance of the price of metal. Copper at 13 cents by the end of the year would surprise nobody familiar with the situation.

Another feature of interest in connection with the coppers is that the low-cost producing companies have by investments back and forth among one another become practically a part of the copper combination. Naturally the output from these companies will be so handled as to help the general situation. China has from time to time attained and has last week inspiration announced that it also has developed the financing and has developed its treasury. It will be at once the erection of a 5,000 ton mill. This is the last of the big new companies to get itself into shape for actual production. JOHN J. MARTIN.—Suburbanites are evading their responsibilities. Greater Boston means good government, lower taxes, better business.

FREDERICK H. VIAUX.—Annexation is the proper and business like solution, but if insuperable difficulties arise, why not try the County plan? A Boston County Council modeled on the London County Council.

JOHN W. WEEKS.—The suburban cities and towns are better governed than Boston. A change would be only political and would not improve business or be beneficial in any other way.

KEEP TRYING TO DO A LITTLE BETTER

Copyright, 1910, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner.

TELL any young man who is beginning to make his way that he will never gain anything but average success and he will probably intimate that you don't know what you are talking about.

No average success for him. He means to get to the top or nowhere. Other men have got there; why not he? There is plenty of opportunity in the world; everybody tells him that. All he has to do is to stretch forth his hand and grasp it. Why, then, should he be told that the chances are against his gaining anything more than average success?

Well, perhaps there is no reason to tell him so. If he is like most of his kind he will find it out soon enough without any telling. He will discover that to keep up with the crowd is comparatively easy; to get even a little ahead of the crowd is tremendously hard.

And, although at the same time will come the discovery that he can get only average success by merely keeping up with the crowd, that way of proceeding will be so much easier than anything else that he will soon come to content himself with it and with the average success that accompanies it.

The explanation of this curious state of affairs is that almost every man is just as lazy as he dares to be. He works manfully while the wolf is barking at the door. As soon as the wolf turns tail and skulks off down the path he lies back in his chair and takes it easy. No use putting up any more barricades now the monster has gone.

All who are born into this world are heirs to a singular quality, which for want of a better name is called "human nature." And it is human nature to loaf when the need of working is no longer in sight.

If we could see around the corner it might be different. If we would take the trouble to think it would be different.

But in the enjoyment of the fat years sent by fortune we forget the coming of the lean years. And we try only hard enough to do what we must. The rest of it we leave to to-morrow and to luck.

In a big insurance company in New York there is a large room in which are employed more than one hundred boookkeepers. Keeping books is not exciting, nor is it inspiring. No man would keep books for amusement, as he would sail a boat or build furniture or mow a lawn or plant a garden.

It has no value as exercise. It is an employment that furnishes no mental relaxation.

Yet here in this one office are these hundred and more men working from 9 o'clock in the morning till 6 o'clock at night, copying names and sums from one book to another, totalling long, dreary columns of figures, writing, blotting, ruling, doing the same thing over and over again for a wage that barely enables them to meet the expenses of living.

Why? Not because they can do no better. Many of them have real ability, and might be doing something just as useful and far more remunerative. Some of them are better qualified in many ways to fill the higher positions than the men now filling them. Yet they remain bookkeepers.

They are average men, and they have found that it is easy to keep up with the crowd.

When they were office boys or cheap clerks they tried hard enough to get ahead, and they did get ahead. They got to the bookkeepers' room.

To get out of that room meant still harder work. They didn't have the inclination for it. They preferred to stay there rather than to find out by extra study more about the business—rather than by coming down a little bit earlier and quitting a little bit later to gain the extra mastery of detail that would mean advancement.

Most of the men in that room will stay there till old age, with its attendant maladies, disqualifies them for further efforts. Then they will drift down into poverty and obscurity—not because of lack of opportunity, but because of lack of will to meet opportunity when it came.

A great many men who have done big things in this country have begun life as bookkeepers. But they have been wise enough to know that once the mechanical details of bookkeeping were mastered, it was time to go on to something higher, and they have been willing to do the work necessary to take the next step.

It is the same way in any business organization. Carrying chains in the railroad surveys of the West are many men who will always carry chains, or at best learn to run a level and transit; a few who will become big engineers and build bridges and skyscrapers and canals and tunnels or take charge of great railways as superintendents or general managers.

The president of the Pennsylvania Railroad once carried a chain with a surveying party. Long ago a young man named George Washington got a practical knowledge of mathematics and geography in the same humble fashion.

The man who was to run a big railroad system kept on trying to do a little more. He learned surveying and studied railroading. He learned railroading, and learned it from the ground up. And when the company needed a man for superintendent he was able to convince those in charge that he was the man. He had devoted every hour he had to spare to learning something about the next higher place.

Washington found that surveying and warfare were carried on almost together. He left his chain to become a soldier, and he kept trying to know a little more of soldiering till he knew all that the British soldiers of that day could teach.

And some of the very men who had been his instructors afterward became his opponents, and found out to their sorrow what an apt pupil he became.

Here and there, if you are a close observer, you will find men who have succeeded because of some peculiar fortune. Often the right kind of a partner brings a man success he could not have gained on his own account. Occasionally a man stumbles upon a business opportunity that was like a gold mine—only waiting to be discovered. He has sufficient sense to stick to it, and becomes rich and respected in consequence.

But the founders of all really great business enterprises are men who have not been content with themselves or with their work—who have kept trying to do a little better, no matter how well they happened to be doing.

The city of New York became great because its position drew to it men who understood the opportunities that it offered.

The men who made it great in the past, like the men who are making it greater in the present and the men who in the future will make it far greater still, are men who have never been satisfied with a little achievement. They have kept trying to do a little better. They have built for the future, and in building up their own business they have built up the whole country, started factories, mill and industrial institutions that depend on the purchasing power of the whole population of the nation—and on which the people of all the nation depend for supplies of food and clothing and building material.

It Is Easy Enough to Do Average Work—And It Brings Average Results. It Is the Extra Effort That Is Difficult, but Only That Really Counts

A manager in a big publishing institution said the other day:

"I heard a man complaining to-day that he didn't have a chance. And he has been here nearly twenty years.

"In that twenty years I have seen dozens of rank outsiders come in here, find a chance, take it and go to the top of the shop or out of it to do better elsewhere.

"While this man was complaining that he didn't have a chance I came here and found a chance that has led to my promotion to my present place at the head of the establishment.

"I know a man that used to work for this never-had-a-chance man as an office boy, and who was used pretty roughly when his boss happened to have one of his grouches against fate.

"The office boy found a chance to be a clerk, then he found a chance to be an auditor. Pretty soon somebody left a chance to be a manager lying around, and the office boy snapped it up.

"He got too big for this place before long, and began looking for chances outside. Now he is with a larger concern, and has just found a chance to be its president, at a salary of fifty thousand dollars a year. That is how source chances have been around here during the twenty years our complainng friend has stayed in his one place."

Such a case as the office boy's in this incident is without doubt exceptional, but no one who has studied his surroundings can deny that chances are to be had for those who seek them, and that it is not difficult to get ahead of the crowd if you keep on trying all the time.

Promotion often is slow. Many a time a man is caught in an eddy of the stream of progress and whirled about till he fears he will never catch a favoring current.

But sooner or later, if he keeps on trying, his chance comes, and after that his success depends only on how hard he tries for it.

Other men may be better equipped mentally. Other men may have a more impressive manner or be better skilled in advancing their own interests.

But the man who tries steadily to do better is the man who does better in the end, and that kind of a man is the man who is going to win while many of his more brilliant brothers waste their opportunities till comes the time when opportunities no longer arrive.

IMPORTED ACTORS CROWD AMERICAN PRODUCT BACK! DOES ANYONE KNOW WHY?

Managers Who Continue to Bring Them Over from London, Duty Free, Have Some Reason, Whether It Be "Class" or "Price."

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

It is beginning to look like a dull season for actors. A trip through the Lambs', Players' or Green Room Clubs in New York will show hundreds of men playing everything from poker to pool, who are waiting for engagements—engagements that may turn up in the next six weeks, but which probably will not.

With so many American actors idling their time at clubs and complaining of the dearth of new productions, you have only to turn a single page to discover that imported actors—principally Englishmen—are finding regular engagements with all of the American managers. You would hardly be expected to believe that the acting force of our drama is in the hands of Europeans, but the fact remains that actors from across the sea are finding it easy going on the American stage.

There are probably thirty men and women in the star "class" who are supplying amusement to American theatregoers, and probably 300 more in less important roles, who are plain, every day importations. And with few exceptions they belong to the London stage. Of course, these players are making good—they satisfy the public, which is all the manager demands. The question might be asked, also, whether the playgoing public is not getting more for its money from the imported actor, whose training amply equips him for any modern role. It is well known that several of our biggest managers have a marked weakness for English players. Maxine Elliott, whose repeated visits to England have infected her seriously with Anglophobia, will have only English players in her support.

IT MAY BE SALARY, TOO.

Another possibility is the chance that American managers may feel that they get more for their money from English actors, who are doubtless content to labor more for art's sake and less for salary than American players. At any rate we are gradually becoming flooded with foreign made actors, and they all seem to be doing pretty well. Of the English stars who are figuring in this and last season's successes you will find G. P. Huntley, Charles Cartwright, Kitty Gordon, H. B. Warner, Mary Mannering and Forbes Robertson. To this list may be added the stars who will appear here in new plays—Charles Wyndham, Marc Moore, Marie Tempest, Kyrle Bellew, J. E. Dodson, Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, Edward Terry, Albert Chevalier, Oscar Ashe, Lily Brayton, Lena Ashwell, George Arliss, William Faversham, Brandon Tynan, Ellis Jeffreys, Weedon Grossmith, H. B. Irving and A. E. Matthews. Something of a formidable list of imported goods—with no duty to be paid.

And there are other importations that are not English—Hedwig Reicher, Sara Bernhardt, Mme. Nazimova, Mme. Bertha Kalich and Mme. Marietta Olly.

While American actors are calmly waiting for engagements that will probably never come, these imported stars and about three hundred other players of lesser calibre are parading before you with great relish. They all like the country, for there is money in it.

One of the liveliest of imported actors is in town now—Percival Knight, who as the droll jockey in "The Arcadians," proves that an actor may almost remain concealed from public view for years before his real worth is brought to light. Mr. Knight has been an amusing chap for many seasons, but it was not until he blossomed forth as Lord Dooly in "The Arcadians" that the critics gave him the slightest attention. Of course, he had been a success at home—he had even toured Asia with repertoire companies, but it required several seasons of hard work before he caught his American audiences by the ears.

CLIFTON CRAWFORD, FROM "ACROSS."

Another Englishman, who had a great sense of humor in London, but who found no market for it in this country when he first landed, was Clifton Crawford. It was ten years ago that Crawford arrived in Boston to play at Keith's. He was a jolly chap with a monologue that had been the real thing in London. He confesses that his first audience at Keith's would not even wait for him to finish, and after that first experience there were no more engagements for him. Crawford simply had to eat more or less regularly, and the only source of income that he could get into practical working order was golf, and the salary he picked up as golf instructor at the Woodland Golf Club in Newton was $60 a month. Inasmuch as the stage persistently refused to beckon to him, Crawford lived by golf for two seasons. And then he captured a job in the chorus. It is a curious coincidence that after he had made good in musical comedy, vaudeville invited him to try the two-a-day once more at something like a real salary. He returned to the Keith circuit and gave the same monologue that brought out such a chill a few years before. This time it was a scream. And he hadn't changed a word in his act.

* * * * * * * * *

Would you believe it—there is a positive demand for blond chorus men! Sounds silly, doesn't it? But you have the word of Thomas Reynolds, general stage director for Charles Frohman, that the blond is the real thing this season. And it is all on account of the women. Mr. Reynolds laments the fact, because, as he explained, "the lighter haired boys are usually lighter headed."

Take Mr. Reynolds's own statement—it's worth reading.

"The demand for blond men in the chorus is unprecedented," he explained, "and it is chiefly due to the changing tastes of women in the audiences—particularly the younger women. I cannot account for the curious psychology of it. Possibly it is because blond men are rare, and women rush for anything that is the least bizarre. Most likely, though, it is because they have more 'flash' on the stage and seem more romantic than the brunette type. We have experimented several times by having six men with dark hair and eyes come on directly before a sextette of flaxen-haired chaps. The latter always get twice the applause.

CHORUS MEN MUST BE BLOND.

This rage for blond men on the part of the women has quite the chorus men's profession. Fellows who have been in the business five or six years and who have succeeded in getting a position have found pace Broadway in vain. Some have used peroxide to land an engagement that they couldn't otherwise get. Unless the rage dies down we are likely to see as much bleaching among the chorus men as among the chorus girls.

"There isn't a manager who wouldn't like to have the feminine contingent back to normal. Lighter haired boys are usually lighter headed. They are rarely intelligent and very difficult to train. You rarely find a man with light hair that has a principal part."

* * * * * * * * *

Those who have seen Miss Nance O'Neil's splendid impersonation of Odette in "The Lily" will have no difficulty in recalling the hard road over which this excellent actress traveled before she reached the point in fame that is the one ambition of every man and woman on the American stage—a Broadway success. Success on Broadway sometimes comes overnight, it is often won by so simple a means as a playful, impertinent slip of the tongue. But it often becomes hard in many instances, and Miss O'Neil is one of them. She tried it several seasons ago and failed. Persistency and loyalty to the best traditions of dramatic art, however, finally broke down the barriers that Broadway had raised against her, and to-day she is an important figure in its dramatic life.

When Miss O'Neil, at her opening performance here in "The Lily," acknowledged the tremendous reception given her by the most fashionable audience that has occupied a Boston theatre this season, and confessed the shock she was really glad to play here once more, she was probably speaking nearer to the truth than most stars who make similar announcements. Boston had received Miss O'Neil when New York's verdict was to call Nantucket in and turning up its nose. The fact that Miss O'Neil did finally win New York to her way of acting only emphasizes the sound judgment of Boston theatregoers in finding that this actress possessed particular gifts that were worth recognition.

The most important event of the week in local theatricals will be the beginning of the engagement of "The Chocolate Soldier" at the Majestic Theatre to-morrow evening. Even "The Merry Widow" failed to outpoint this operetta in Broadway popularity, and there is little doubt that the Boston run will build a new record in prosperity in the lighter form of musical entertainment.

SOME STARS OF THE WEEK AT THEATRES OF BOSTON

Bills at the Theatres

Majestic Theatre.

At last Boston is to have "The Chocolate Soldier," of which so much has been written, talked and sung in the last year. Since it made its great success at the Casino in New York, where it ran through an entire season, the two-acter bobbed up in remarkable, too, for the fact that Strauss is a musical satirist and so has given the witty lines of Shaw a "Arms and the Man" their point and ring for musical theatre. It is said that Stanislaus Stange who made libretto of the Viennese writers Bern ier and Jacobson into English has retained much of the original Shaw flavor.

In the length of the Wallace opera Comique season in Boston, the same organization that gave the opera in New York a record run, with it, too, comes the famous orchestra of forty soloists under the direction of Signor A. De Novel the of Strauss said that his music never lending of the score had such to do with success in this country.

Castle Square Theatre.

It will be an elaborate production in every way that Mr. Craig will put on at the Castle Square to-morrow. "The Talk of New York" is one of the merriest of the George Cohan merrit pieces, and with its large chorus, its original orchestral effects and its dancing numbers it promises to reproduce the great success scored by "The Circus Girl" two seasons ago.

In "The Talk of New York" is all the go and fun all the Cohan songs, all the dash and life that are familiar to many, many thousands of people who have seen and enjoyed the plays of that author of mirth. The role of "Sid" Burns, the hero, will be played by Donald Meek, who has no rival in that line, and Mary Ryan will have a part that will be no less delightful and far more than was her part in "The Circus Girl." The best scene about "The Talk of New York" is genuine novelty, which gives merit hours of never-ending pleasure to long audiences. It is now in its Square in a limited one.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

Every week at B. F. Keith's Theatre new faces brighten the bill, and this week will be no exception, as there will be a number of newcomers, all stars in their particular lines, both old and tried favorites.

One of the newcomers will be Gene Greene, who has made a tremendous hit during the past four weeks singing his own songs in a characteristic manner. The Reed Brothers are also newcomers, recently with one of the big minstrel troupes.

Among the old favorites are Will H. Murphy and Blanche Nichols in what is probably the funniest farce-sketch ever called "Cured at Last." Grimm's dogs are a little gem, and the most wonderful troupe of native actors ever on the stage, Lowell Fitzhugh's Katherine Nelson and Elizabeth Otto, in their pleasing, and Cooper and Robinson, colored entertainers.

Grand Opera House.

An unusually strong attraction will be offered at the Grand Opera House this week in "The Turning Point." Preston Gibson penned drama of modern society life. "The Turning Point" was produced for the first time last season in New York, where it was very successful as one of the most widely discussed plays of the season. The cast of the piece is said in Alexandria, Va., Mr. Gibson's home. The scheme is said to be equally witty throughout and undoubtedly "The Turning Point" will meet with the approval of Bostonians on this, its first visit to Boston.

Shubert Theatre.

Gertrude Elliott in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" begins the third week of her engagement at the Shubert Theatre to-morrow night. There will be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. Since its initial performance in this city "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" has steadily gained in popular favor and the secret of this is not far to seek, for a finer play and a finer company has not been seen in Boston for many years.

Boston Theatre.

The third and farewell week of the engagement of "Girlies" at the Boston Theatre will begin on Monday night. Such a production of the present season has made a more particular and generous appeal to local theatregoers than Frederic Thompson's production of the big musical success "Girlies" might reasonably be expected to do. Indeed, the demand for seats for the last week has prohibited the extension of its engagement here.

Colonial Theatre.

That marvelous combination of melody and melody, of opulence and of, known to all Boston amusement as "The Arcadians" enters the sixth week of its engagement at the Colonial Theatre to-morrow, still holding the season's record for prosperity and popularity. "The Arcadians" Manager Charles Frohman sent to Boston as entertainment of appeals equally to the honors and the bery.

Globe Theatre.

"The Family," a drama by Rolfe Davis that enjoyed a long run in Chicago, where it was declared an interesting portrayal of the times, will come to the Globe Theatre with the original cast and scenic production as promised.

Tremont Theatre.

"The Fortune Hunter" seems to have found its forte. Certainly it is now in unquestioned popularity at the Tremont Theatre, and night after night the audiences prove to be quite as enthusiastic as those in New York at last year's performance. The cast and the production remain quite much the same. Rowland Rogers is the very smart, fresh John Barrymore down to the most insignificant player in this new rural comedy.

Park Theatre.

Marie Doro has only one week left of her engagement at the Park Theatre, where "Electricity" is still the potent attraction and has served to add greatly to the personal popularity of this young actress. William Gillette has been as successful in giving her a character that suits her personality as he was in "Clarice" in which she first appeared as his leading lady.

Hub Theatre.

There will be fun galore at the Hub Theatre this week with the Tea Party Youngsters in a Turkish Mashu, comedy scheduled as the feature. Surrounding them are Hammond & Forrester, singing and talking comedians, and the Weston Brothers, comedy bag punchers and hurlesque boxers.

Bills at the Theatres

Hollis Street Theatre.

Nance O'Neil's return to Boston at the Hollis Street Theatre last Monday evening brought out the dear critics of the season there. It had been two years since this emotional actress had appeared in Boston, and there was great popular interest to see her back again at the play house, where some of her most artistic successes were made. By first time all Boston knows the result, and "The Lily" will continue its prosperity.

Howard Athenaeum.

What is considered the best show that has come to the Howard this season is "The Merry Whirl" selected the show of quality in the company will be seen such capable artists as Marie Baumgarde, Alice Bradley, Phillie Gravell, Maymie Bonner, Phil Doyle, Billy Barker, Phil Baker and others. There will be the usual seven big vaudeville features in the continuous part of the program.

A Sunday concert of excellence will be given to-night at 7.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

For management at the Bowdoin Square Theatre will offer a big combination show this week. A big feature will be that of Lloyd Ice and the colored singers known as The Dandy Dishes. There will be the last week of Mr. Gibson and his Pekin Imperials.

Waldron's Casino.

"The Queen of Bohemia," which opens at Waldron's Casino next week. The afternoon offers real burlesque, well cast and handsomely mounted and brilliantly costumed; in addition to this, all the requirements of electricity are commanded, making the ensemble equal to the musical comedies which play at high prices.

Columbia Theatre.

James H. Curtin's "Broadway Gaiety Girls" will be the attraction at the Columbia Theatre this week, presenting two rollicking burlesques entitled "The Count and the King" and "Hotel Topsy Turvey." On Wednesday evening Jim McLaughlin, the Irish Rose weight champion, will wrestle Al Gibson and on Friday and Saturday matinees will be given a change.

Gaiety Theatre.

This week's attraction at the Gaiety Theatre will be "Three Hastings a Big Show." The company is one of the best [illegible] and "A Trip to the Country" [illegible].

Scenic Temple.

A big feature show is promised at the Scenic Temple this week. Every number on the long program has at some time made a decided hit with the Scenic audiences. The illustrated songs will be up-to-date and the moving pictures will be along each general lines.

King Philip Trips.

The trips of the steamer King Philip to the Sound grounds continue as popular as during the summer months. There is no fear to provide passengers for a day's enjoyable outing. Lines and bait are furnished free of charge.

Satellite Trips.

Passengers who have made several trips on the steamer Satellite declare that as a cool breeze is encountered in the deep sea they long as good as at the time of the season. Chowder dinners are served free to passengers.

IN THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD

With amusement and enjoyment nearly 1000 prisoners at the State Penitentiary, Columbus, O., for the first time in their lives, saw motion pictures recently. The 1,500 others who saw them were equally delighted.

Instead of the regular chapel services at the prison, usually consisting of songs and hymns, music and a sermon, the prisoners were entertained by several subjects taken from life, and projected on a huge screen stretched over the platform.

The Belvedere Hall, the oldest theatre in Cumberland, Md., closed as a playhouse for more than a score of years, was reopened Sept. 24, as a motion picture and vaudeville house by Baker. It had in recent years been used as a business college in the old playhouse Mary Anderson, the elder Jefferson and many players of renown, now dead and gone, starred, from shortly after the Civil War until the new playhouse was erected following the erection of the City Hall.

Motion pictures are advanced by the Chicago Health Department to educate the public in matters pertaining to health. Relatively few people, say the health officials, will go a mile the street to hear a lecture on health. But if moving pictures are introduced as part of the show, crowds will come, they do. The Health Department has had [illegible] moving pictures on the fly for the last six months and the [illegible] have been shown in the five-cent theatres to the congested districts.

Shareholders in some of the existing picture enterprises are getting a chance to [illegible] their investments. It is announced that in none of the largest cities in the country the amount taken in from the box office receipts of moving picture houses reached the great total of $37,000,000, and of which amount $15,000,000 was paid by the shoppers for the rental of the films used for those shows. The amount paid to the producers of the films was about $10,000,000, and the rest went to stockholders for nine cities, one can imagine what the rest of the country produced for the manufacturer. Edison's royalty alone is estimated to be about $8,000 per week.

DEFENDS RENO IN PLAY.

Violet Dale to Star in Latest from Mark Swan.

Mark Swan, who has just written "A Message from Reno," to be used as a starring vehicle for Violet Dale, says that Reno, Nev., has for a long time been a subject for unjust criticism, and the public at large has been prejudiced against the place by those who have no intention to discover certain facts that have hitherto been connected with the Nevada city and show some of the commendable qualities of the place.

"All the sensational stories told of Reno are unfounded," says Mr. Swan. "I have had I want the truth to be known, so I've written a play about it. I want the people to know how just and merciful the Nevada divorce laws are and what a godsend they are to poor, suffering women in the East.

EXPERT FROM WEST LECTURES ON COFFEE

Mrs. Haffner of Detroit Says the Secret Is All in the Clean Pot.

What your coffee had yesterday morning? Did you have a grouch all day on account of it? Same old story every morning?

There's an answer at the Mechanics' Exposition where Mrs. Bertha Palmer Haffner, a Western cooking teacher and expert on domestic science, is giving daily lectures on how to make a good cup of coffee.

Mrs. Haffner is the head of the Detroit Cooking School, has written several cook books and has lectured from coast to coast. Her talks are not only on coffee making but on all branches of domestic science with particular emphasis on cake making and bread making.

Facts as to Coffee.

"As a good cup of coffee constitutes the most essential feature of a good breakfast, the making of coffee should be given the greatest consideration," said Mrs. Haffner. "The first essential is the quality of the coffee, and the second the pot it is made in.

"There are several ways of making coffee—plain boiled, drip, percolated and extracted. Whichever method is used, it is absolutely necessary to observe the strictest rules of cleanliness. A new pot of any kind of metal should be scrubbed with soap and hot water, scalded and put in the sun to air. When ready to use scald again. After using scour it well with hot water, using no soap, and with a small brush or a piece of cheesecloth around a wire to clean out the spout. Air until used again.

"The up-to-date method of making coffee is to use a modern percolating pot. Measure a heaping teaspoonful of medium ground coffee for each cup of cold water. Put the coffee into the basket on the cold water in the pot, place on the fire and in a special lid that comes with these pots. In from five to fifteen minutes the coffee is fully for use, according to the size of the pot and the amount of water to be used.

"The automatic percolating pump the water through the coffee again and again, and it is only possible through the little cup into the liquid on the top. With good coffee to start with and fresh running water, it is impossible for the cook to spoil the coffee, so there is no chance of overboiling or of allowing the grounds to remain to take coffee too long.

As Made in New Orleans.

"For the famous New Orleans French market coffee, this is the leading table specialty of pulverized coffee put in cloth bags, and, to a third of a cup of boiling water which has been strained pour with a fine strong coal water. Although this is the old method, it is one of the best.

"The French drip coffee pot is also a favorite method of making coffee. The coffee is ground very fine, and the water is poured on and strained through the fine particles of coffee, leaving them behind. Measure two tablespoonfuls of ground coffee for each cup of boiling water. It requires about ten minutes to percolate. This is a very strong black coffee for after dinner serving, and for social uses that is made usually the latter being poured on last coffee, thus only heating the liquids to the point. Very many serve it this, but I really think it was an old fad. I like it with it.

"For safe no oil, make cafe noir and serve with an egg shell to clear and settle. The real Parisian cafe serves it by pouring into the cup first a small dash of hot water, then the coffee with sugar to taste.

ACTORS LOSE OUT.

Pay for Seats, Get in Wrong Theatre

Joseph Brennan and Harry Weaver are two actors well known on Broadway who have been quite a while. A story comes to light concerning one of their adventures said to have occurred yesterday notwithstanding the fact that it happened at the opening of "Baby Burch" at the Republic Theatre. Brennan and Weaver were not very long during those days, and after several hours of entertaining found themselves in front of the Weber Theatre.

"We should see Willie Pollinger open in his new vehicle," said Brennan.

"All right let's go," said Weaver.

"How can we," said Brennan. "The theatre is sold out for the opening and we would have to buy the seats from speculators."

However the two actors walked toward the Herald Square Theatre and after getting rushed up to the box office said:

"Best low priced $2 seats."

Brennan and Weaver quickly gave up the price and went inside. They were enough to be used in the best seats on the front row.

"By George, this great luck," said Brennan. "Just think, we got these excellent seats at actor cost."

"And on opening night, too," said Weaver.

They chatted with each other until the curtain went up and all through the entire first act were very pleased. I think that Brad missed her cue when she came on. I'll see about it. Louis Mann is "The Cheater," when it was on first began at the Lyric, and Rocky Burns was in the theatre next door.

Many business was very lively, but "Bindle Burns" soon began to fall off. Nobody began to keep up in golf, for the off people.

NEVER AGAIN, SAYS DOYLE.

Declares He Won't Write Another Play.

Sir A. Conan Doyle has formally announced that he will never write another play. He says:

"I am not saying a single work because it does not interest me. It interests me too much. It is so absorbing that it draws one's mind away from the deeper things of life. It makes such a demand on one's time that it is difficult to settle down steadily to any special course of reading or literary work. I have by me a slightly old play which I wrote some time ago. Whenever that is produced—if it ever is produced—I must be at my own expense. The cost of production would prevent it ever being accepted by any manager. It is a play which would frighten the most experienced of stage carpenters.

"Why? I call it 'The Lift.' The scene lies at the top of an Eiffel Tower. All the characters must ascend and descend in a proper working lift. Entrances are perpendicular instead of sensational. The piece ends with a startling sensation—a terrific catastrophe.

"For those who can treat the deep matters of life dramatically it is different; but I recognize my own limitations in that respect. At the same time, I could conceive of certain forms of thought and ideas coming to a man which were only capable of dramatic treatment. So I make an absolute pledge that I will not again write for the stage."

MILLIONAIRES HAVE WON CASINO BRIDES

If Edna Dodge Sues for Divorce It Will Break Chain of Happy Marriages.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—If Mrs. Edna Stock Dodge, who is now separated from her multi millionaire husband, Wm. Parker Dodge, sues for a divorce, as it is reported she will, it will be the first of the many famous marriages between former Casino girls and multi millionaires to be turned out unhappily.

The Casino has been the scene of some of the most celebrated and interesting romances that the American stage knows. It seems as if every especially attractive girl in the Casino much in evidence was bound to marry a multi millionaire sooner or later.

Married Young Higginson.

Everybody remembers Jean Caldwell in "Fortuna," one of the most brilliant of the gay throng of beauties that graced that famous production. It was not long before Alfred Henry Higginson, of Boston, members of one of the richest Back Bay families of that city, fell captive to her charms and in due time led her to the altar. Mr. and Mrs. Higginson are, according to all reports, an ideally happy couple.

Catherine Cooper, also of "Fantana," met her fate in another millionaire, Alexander Irving Dodge, and married him. No cloud has disturbed their nuptial bliss either.

Then there was Edith Kelly, one of the "Belle" girls in "Havana," who is now Mrs. Frank Gould and supremely happy as a result, everyone knows. Lotta Faust and another score others of Mme. Kiralfy in the old days at the Casino and members of that now historical "Floradora" Mme. Sherry, marriage to Willie Phelps Dodge one of the very rich men of Michigan, is a matter of history. They have really lived abroad.

Thorne-Pope Romance.

Another famous Casino marriage was that between Sybil Thorne and Charles Dana Gibson, whose first wife married Donald Ryan. It is safe to predict that before the present season there will be several new chapters to be added to Casino history.

Odell Cohan is perhaps the most famous example of a Casino Girl marrying a business prince, the capturing W. C. Corey, head of the Steel Trust. Mabel Carrier stepped from the Casino ranks to wedded bliss with D. G. Reid, the oil plate millionaire. Clara Taylor, another Casino product, married a title in England.

REV. FATHER JOHN A DALY

ARRANGEMENTS for the fifth annual reunion and dancing party to be held for the building fund of St. Mark's Catholic church, Dorchester, are now in full progress. The Rev. John A. Daly, pastor of the parish feels that the affair this year will eclipse all other similar events to accommodate all comfortably he has engaged International hall, Dudley street, for Friday evening, October 28.

The parishioners are making a great effort to have the reunion a most successful event. Its success means the building of a nave and sanctuary church, near the site of the old wooden chapel which is fast becoming too small.

What Will Be the Fate of This Artist Model?

(Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

From The "Cosmopolitan," November Number. Copyright, 1910, by the International Magazine Company.

Drawn By CHARLES DANA GIBSON

"I know perfectly well that this isn't right," she said, helping him and then herself. "But I'm wondering what there is about it that isn't right."

CHARLES DANA GIBSON, who is the greatest of American illustrators, and Robert W. Chambers, who is the greatest of American novelists, have created a new American girl. This new Gibson-Chambers girl makes her debut in the Cosmopolitan Magazine for November.

In drawing her Mr. Gibson—in this, his first serious work since his return from abroad—has moulded an entirely new type to fit Mr. Chambers's heroine. Broader and stronger than ever, the master of black and white shows himself after years of voluntary exile from the medium which brought him his great success. And in "The Common Law"—the title of this newest Chambers story—the novelist grips the very essence of New York's aristocracy and Bohemia with the same masterly touch which made famous his other recent novels, "The Firing Line," "The Fighting Chance" and "The Outsiders."

The name of this new Gibson-Chambers girl is Valerie West. She is intellectual; she is primitive; she has caste; SHE IS AN ARTIST MODEL—for extremely odd and new-century reasons. Here, through the courtesy of the Cosmopolitan, you see this newest type taking luncheon with the first artist for whom she has ever posed—and, incidentally, the hero of the story. He has already put her down in his model book as: "Height, medium; eyes, a dark brown; hair, thick, lustrous and brown; head, unusually beautiful; throat and neck, perfect." And that is about as far as the description need go now.

What will be the fate of this new Trilby in the hands of these two magicians of words and line? What will happen to her? How will they work out her destiny? And how will they work out the destiny of the hero of the story, who looks so much like an idealized Mr. Chambers? The editor of the Cosmopolitan refuses to divulge the sequence of events which follow the astonishing situation set forth in the first instalment of "The Common Law," which is printed in the November Cosmopolitan.

SUCH ODD BIRDS—BOSTON'S CHORUS GIRLS!

By DOROTHY DIX

(Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner, Great British Rights Reserved.)

Oh, Ma-ma, what is this tall and beautiful creature?

That is the Chorus Girl my child, but it is not a creature. It is a bird.

To what species does it belong, Ma-ma?

It belongs to the [illegible] the lalapoora, my child [illegible]

In a [illegible]

Oh! [illegible] Ma-ma?

Ah, [illegible] plumage it has, Ma-ma.

Fine [illegible] birds, my child.

Where did it get its lovely plumage, Ma-ma?

Hush. Little children must not ask so many questions.

But look, Ma-ma, the poor creature can scarcely walk.

It has on a hobble skirt, my child, that is just a little tighter than anybody else's. Besides, it is so used to riding in taxis that it makes its feet sore to walk.

Oh, look, Ma-ma, what large eyes it has, with such a wide, guileless, baby stare in them.

Nobody is as innocent and unsophisticated as a Chorus Girl looks, my child.

See what lovely curls and puffs it has, Ma-ma.

The Chorus Girl always has the newest thing in hair, my child.

And what queer feet it has, Ma-ma! Its brains are in its heels, my child. Where does the Chorus Girl come from, Ma-ma?

She is hatched out in [illegible] places, my child, but her favorite habitat is Broadway, and at this season of the year they flock there until the Great White Way is blocked by their big hats and pearl earrings.

Who discovered the first Chorus Girl, Ma-ma?

Adam, my child, and some of the original ones are living yet, and are to be found on the French stage.

Has the Chorus Girl then extraordinary longevity, Ma-ma?

She used to have, so that it was not uncommon for a man's grandson to fall in love with the same third one from the end to the left of the stage as he had done, but the public taste is now for squabs, and managers who reform the old ones as soon as they begin to get passe and shrimpy, or acquire apple dumpling figures.

Were the original Chorus Girls imported from this country, Ma-ma?

No, yes, my child, but we have been so successful in crowning the Edna May brand of cool lookers that we supply many of the British noblemen with Music Hall wives.

Is the Chorus Girl a domestic fowl, Ma-ma?

Not at all, my child. She flies the home coop at every opportunity.

Does no one try to tame her?

Oh, yes. She is known as the Millionaire's Pet, and many rich old men buy one and put it in a gilded cage, and take it home with them.

What happens then, Ma-ma?

The rich old man gets a hole pecked in his pocketbook, my child, and the first time the cage door is left open the bird is apt to take wing.

Is not the Chorus Girl industrious, Ma-ma?

Oh, yes, my child. She has few equals as a cheerful worker.

What does the Chorus Girl feed on, Ma-ma?

It depends on who pays my child. If it is at home it can subsist on a cold potato and a chunk of corned beef from a delicatessen store, but when it is invited out to dinner or supper it takes $25 worth of feeds and drinks to satisfy its appetite.

It has then a good digestion, Ma-ma?

Oh, yes, my child. The digestion of the Chorus Girl makes the stomach of the ostrich look like a dyspepsia tablet.

Does the Chorus Girl marry, Ma-ma?

Oh, yes, my child. Marrying is one of its principal habits.

Is the Chorus Girl clever, Ma-ma?

Oh, yes, my child. There are many members of the chorus who are such great financiers that on a salary of $30 per week they are enabled to live in fine hotels, keep automobiles, buy diamonds and Paris clothes, and go to Europe every Summer.

What good managers they must be, Ma-ma!

Oh, yes, my child. When the Suffragettes get the right to vote without doubt they will appoint a Chorus Girl to be Secretary of the Treasury.

Has the Chorus Girl any other talent, Ma-ma?

Oh, yes, my child. She can tell a Good Thing as far as she can see it.

Is the Chorus Girl a useful fowl, Ma-ma?

Oh, yes, my child. She is most useful in helping rich young men to get rid of the money their fathers earned. It is impossible to imagine what the Pittsburg millionaires would have done with all their money except for the kind assistance that they have had from the chorus.

Can the Chorus Girls sing, Ma-ma?

There have been freak cases in which she could, but as a general thing she barely makes a noise.

Can she dance gracefully, Ma-ma?

Oh, no, my child; but she wears seven different changes of costume at every performance and looks all to the good. If you will notice, you will see that the singing birds are mostly drab looking and homely, and do not travel on their shape.

Do women admire the Chorus Girl and desire one for a pet, Ma-ma?

Oh, no, my child. It is the men who insist on paying out good money to go and spend an evening looking at these beautiful creatures. A man's wife always says: "I don't know what you want to go and see them for. I think that Chorus Girls are perfectly horrid."

After the Chorus Girl is caught is she easy to manage, Ma-ma?

Oh, no, my child; all the managers of musical comedies are bald and stoop-shouldered and have a wild and hunted look in their eyes.

Are there many fine collections of Chorus Girls in New York, Ma-ma?

Oh, yes, my child. Every season the collection of Henry Savage is worth going miles to see, to say nothing of the pretty bunches that Mr. Frohman and Klaw & Erlanger and the Shuberts round up.

Oh, listen, Ma-ma, at that sound of popping corks.

They are feeding the Chorus Girls, my child. Come and let us see them devour lobster and lap up champagne.

SOME OF THE FUNNY THINGS THAT THE CHILDREN SAY

"SO you took dinner at Willie Stout's house to-day, did you?" said father. "I hope when it came to extra helpings you had manners enough to say 'No'!"

"Yes, sir," replied Tommy. "I said 'no' several times because Mrs. Stout kept asking me if I had enough."

A LITTLE son of strict parents, whose greatest joy had hitherto been the weekly prayer meeting, was taken by his nurse to the circus for the first time. When he got home, he exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma, if you ever went to a circus once, you'd never go to prayer meeting again."

ETHEL could only count up to four. One day she had five cherries.

"How many cherries have you got?" asked her sister.

"Wait until I eat one and then I'll tell you," she replied.

ONE brother was in the eighth grade and the other in the second. Their monthly reports showed a higher average for the older boy. The younger, unwilling to admit that he was outdone, got down on the floor with both cards before him to solve the mystery. After several minutes hard study, he arose with the solution.

"No wonder! Just look how many more studies you have to make up your average!"

WILLIE went to the beach with his father. They hired bathing suits, and when Willie got into the water he screamed:

"Papa, this bathing suit is no good. The water goes right through it and I'm all wet."

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER—Johnny, would you like to dwell in heaven?"

Johnny—No, ma'am.

Teacher—Why not?

Johnny—'Cause we've moved three times already this year, and I'm getting tired of helpin' pack up.

HELEN'S nurse has trouble to make her mind and often calls upon Mrs. Smith, Helen's grandma, for help. The other day Helen was unusually headstrong and the nurse said:

"Whatever shall I do with you?"

"Oh, call Mrs. Smith," was the calm reply.

A KINDERGARTNER in a Brooklyn public school was looking over the hands of her small charges. Finally she stopped in front of one little fellow, and, assuming a horrified air, said:

"Why, Joseph, what makes your hands so dirty?"

The child looked them over for a moment and then drawled:

"Me father uses black soap and so do I."

A LITTLE friend of ours, after repeating the Lord's Prayer, was told that he had omitted, "Give us this day our daily bread."

"Oh, I don't have to say that," he said. "My papa has a good job and can buy our bread."

ONE day a teacher was asking each of her pupils in turn what he was going to become when he grew up. Coming to Charles, she said:

"Well, Charles, what do you hope to be?"

"A man," was the prompt reply.

"JOHNNY and his brother were playing on the street the other evening when a neighbor gave each of them five cents, and they ran to the store and bought ice cream. When they got home Johnny looked at his mother earnestly and said:

"Mother, I can't bear to see you without any cream. Take Willie's."

A LITTLE girl from the country was visiting at my home last week, and as her mother was turning out the gas in her bedroom, she said:

"Be sure and turn it off good so I won't die of gastritis."

LULU was watching her father sow some oats in the yard.

"Is that what makes the grass grow?" she asked.

"Yes, my dear," said her father.

"Well, then, when the horses eat oats does grass grow inside of them?"

* * *

MY husband has worn a serious look on his face ever since the other day, when our little daughter, perched on his knee asked:

"Papa, was it a wise person who said that the good die young?"

"Yes," he replied. "I suppose he must have been very wise."

"Well," the child replied, after thinking it over for a little while, "I'm not so much surprised about you, but I don't see how mamma ever managed to get growed up."

* * *

ONE day while Henry was being dressed for school, he became very restless and his mother asked him what the trouble was.

"Ma, I don't want to go to school," he answered slowly.

His mother looked very much surprised and told him that all good boys must go to school so they would be smart when they grew up. He thought intently a while, and then said:

"Say, ma, will I have to go to school when I get old enough to buy me a wife?"

SUN-KISSED MAID OF AUTUMN RULES AS SEASON TURNS

Aflame With Energy She Brings the Sweet Breath of Woodland and Hill Into the Crowded City Streets

By ELINABETH ELLIOTT.

THE Autumn girl is with us again—that is, for just brief enchanting glimpses—for the woods all drenched in sunset hues and the hills in their haze of purple and gold still hold her as their very own.

She deigns to drop into town for only a few fleet hours of shopping and is off again to the country home which is just now the highly favored haunt of the leisured and elect.

My, but she's a growing creature that is good to behold! Windblown and sun-drenched, she is fairly aflame with energy.

She seems to have taken on some of the gorgeous, vivid life that swirls all about her as she spins in her car along the kaleidoscopic ways of the open road. May the hurrying days hasten her back to town, we exult in her presence.

Another group of girls commanding our interest just now are the debutantes who are tip-toed with expectancy on the threshold of society's larger world and they are somewhat awed at the widening horizons.

Life for them just now is a matter of frills and thrills.

"How will I look and what shall I wear at that first wonderful coming-out?" is the ever present question not to be hushed until entirely settled. And it surely is enough to make even the bravest of them quake in their little boots and pucker their pretty brows, at the new perplexities that come with the new opportunities.

The social events pre-eminently pleasing at this season are the "week-end affairs. The country home just now is a "palace of delight" and will hold its owners as a favored abode of the elect until after the holidays which come all too soon for those who are enamoured of country life.

COUNTRY HOUSES ARE OPEN

Mrs. Allen Curtis and Miss Evelyn Curtis, who have been making a short visit in New York, have returned to their summer estate at Beverly Farms where they will remain until after Thanksgiving, when they will open their town house on Beacon street.

The Nathaniel Thayers, who on account of the state of Mr. Thayer's health are remaining at Newport until the last of the month, are at that time to go to their estate at Lancaster where they will remain until after Thanksgiving before opening their Fairfield street home for the Winter. The Thayers have as their guests Count and Countess Moltke, who have only recently returned from their Summer spent in Europe.

The Samuel D. Warrens, who are at the Otis Luke cottage, Valleyside, Beverly Farms, will come up to town the first of November when they will occupy the house on the corner of Fairfield and Marlboro streets which Mrs. Warren's father, Washington B. Thomas, presented to her some weeks ago. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas are also to remain at their place, Netherfield, at Pride's Crossing, until the first of the month when they will come into town for the Winter. The Thomases spent last Winter in New York.

Herbert M. Sears and his two pretty and interesting young daughters, the Misses Lily and Phyllis have returned from their trip to New York and are at their Pride's Crossing villa, "Wood Rock," where they will remain until November when they will open their town house on Commonwealth avenue, which will be the scene of much gayety the coming Winter as Miss Lily Sears is to make her debut in December

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Cure

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.

This recipe makes a pint of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually stops the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, sore lungs, asthma, throat troubles, etc.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents' worth) in a pint bottle and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pine is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this recipe have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.

THE LAUGHING SATYR

FOURTEENTH INSTALMENT

This knowledge brought an unpleasant companion in its train—a realization that had seemed over enough to Beatrice if Mr. Hayman could study the profile of his young ladies from the pavement so could any other change prou[illegible] See and a sudden vision that left her hot and cold of the white, satirical, grief-ravaged face of Mrs. Sturgeon suddenly lighting with malicious pleasure at the sight of her erstwhile companion in such a gallery.

Then the vision faded swiftly. The auburn lady pinched her arm gently.

"Wake up," she said shyly, "you will need your eyes about you today, I can tell you."

ALMONG the crowd momentarily past the La Lola Beauty Parlor four days later was a man with shrewd, bright eyes in a whimsical face keenly alive to every sight the opening kaleidoscope of the streets afforded him. He uttered a sudden exclamation, looked more sharply still, adjusting the eye glass he wore firmly as though unable to accept the testimony of his eyes, then, on an impulse, he turned and entered the Beauty Parlor.

So it was that Beatrice, as she sat in the shop, looked up to encounter the amazed, incredulous gray eyes of Dominic Fleury.

"Miss Charters, I thought I could not be mistaken. How in—what an age it is since I

He bent forward and took her hand in his, her unwilling cold little hand that lay only for an instant in his warm clasp, then was withdrawn, leaving him with a sense of loss.

"What are you doing here?" he said in a low, quick tone. Across the shop in his quick, trained observation had caught sight of Mr. Henry Hayman, newly emerged from his late behind the counter and regarding him with a stare of most undisguised hostility and amazement. "Good Scott, Miss Charters, what are you doing in this gallery—this is no place for you—"

But Beatrice the sight of this man who was Dick Jardine's friend, had acted as a tonic, driving out the threatening mists of faintness by a counter shock.

"Oh, please ask me nothing, Mr. Fleury," she said. "And—if you would be kind, please go away. You will only get me into trouble if you remain here."

Her low voice, her evident distress, a certain indecision on Dominic Fleury's face, none of these signs were lost on Mr. Hayman as he leaned on his counter scrutinizing the one absolutely forbidden thing—a man in conversation with one of his "Graces."

"Miss Charters, 'ere, what's the meaning of this? Don't you know that this is forbidden? And you, sir! What is your pleasure? Sorry, but gossiping with my young ladies is against the rule."

Fleury on the Scene

Fleury turned his head in the direction of the voice, looked at the under-sized man as he leaned over the counter with a red, wrathful countenance and fixed staring eyes, with a bland, uninterested gaze, and from him back again to Beatrice's white, pained face.

"Miss Charters, I will settle matters with this man • • • after all, I am not a stranger to you—remember what good friends we had grown in Waterloo street."

"You are very kind. But the real kindness would be for you to go and leave me alone."

Beatrice's voice faltered; God knew she would gladly snonch have gone out then and there with this man who was Dick Jardine's friend.

Off with Fleury

Fleury had an altercation with Hayman, and then called a cab. He knew Beatrice could then Hayman called a police man to prevent, if possible, Fleury taking Beatrice away with him

"It is your wish to leave with this gentleman?" he asked.

And Beatrice said, "Yes." There was no longer any question of remaining where she was. That was utterly impossible.

Without a word the constable went out and whistled for a cab. One was at the curb in a moment as by magic. He assisted Beatrice, all oddly dressed as she was, into it, and touched his helmet to Fleury as the taxi wheeled round

Great recurring waves of faintness swept her; Dominic Fleury, once more alive to a certain element of the ludicrous in the situation, looked at her with anxious eyes, wondering if she would faint

And, as though his glance had power to rouse her out of the lethargy into which she was failing, Beatrice looked up, met his eyes and remembered

She put up her hands, strove to gather her hair together, it was easy enough to gather its soft masses into a shining rope, but she had no pins, no means of adjusting it.

"Oh, what am I to do and where are we going? Mr. Fleury, I know you meant to be most frightfully kind—but you would have done so much better to leave me where I was."

Her sentence that had begun with a note of mirth trailed off suddenly into something suspicious like a sob. How could she explain to the man who, after all, was little more than a stranger, what the La Lola Beauty Parlor had represented to her—a foothold, precarious enough, but yet a foothold in the world—food, drink, a shelter over her head o'nights

(To Be Continued Monday.)

(Copyright in America by London Daily Mail, 1910)

Last night, long awake, wide-eyed through the long, lonely hours, it had seemed over enough to Beatrice Charters to tell herself that when morning came she would send a note of refusal to Mr Henry Hayman, of the La Lola Beauty Parlor, when morning came it was not over. With morning came Mrs. Valden and a necessity for explanation.

"I hope you were unsuccessful?" She fixed Beatrice with a cold, rapacious eye.

Beatrice met that was unfortunate. You ain't one of the lucky ones, are you? And mean I make so bold as to ask if you are anything else in view?"

Beatrice responded hesitatingly that there was a possibility of work, there was something unfeeling, it seemed to her, in her woman's cold stare. Her hand shook as Hattie as she poured out the pale, straw-colored tea into her thick, blue bordered cup.

"I'm glad to hear it." Mrs. Valden's thin lips closed with a snap as she took up the impounded tray and held it against her flat breast like a buckler. "Business isn't good for young women; to put it straight. So, if you please, Miss—should you not be ordered by the end of the week I'm afraid I be needin' your room for a young party as is not a stranger to it."

She went out without waiting for any reply, afraid lest some foolish weakness might steal out along that narrow passage where Beatrice had trodden a faint path that led to the gate of her heart.

"Just decides it!" Beatrice set down the cup she had raised to her lips; she could not drink the hot liquid that masqueraded as tea, and went over to the window to look at the clock on the church in the square

An Inspection

Half an hour later she was hanging up her coat and hat and robing herself in the white circular overall according to instructions in the small dressing room assigned to the young ladies in Mr Henry Hayman's Beauty Parlor

Beatrice had been waiting for about an hour and a half before the proprietor of the Beauty Parlor arrived

She was made aware of his presence by a persistent tapping on the glass of the door behind her, a tapping that to her sensitive nerves grew gradually to take a manner bending in her temples.

The auburn haired lady beside her glanced coyly through the veil of her hair over her shoulder and gave a short, subdued giggle.

"Best if it ain't Ikey," she said in a half disappointed voice

Beatrice did not turn her head, but, without glancing up from the sewing with which she had provided herself, she was conscious that Hayman stared long and hard at her through the side window before he left the pavement to enter the shop.

This knowledge brought an unpleasant companion in its train—a realization that had seemed over enough to Beatrice if Mr. Hayman could study the profile of his young ladies from the pavement so could any other change prou[illegible] See and a sudden vision that left her hot and cold of the white, satirical, grief-ravaged face of Mrs. Sturgeon suddenly lighting with malicious pleasure at the sight of her erstwhile companion in such a gallery.

Great recurring waves of faintness swept her; Dominic Fleury, once more alive to a certain element of the ludicrous in the situation, looked at her with anxious eyes, wondering if she would faint

And, as though his glance had power to rouse her out of the lethargy into which she was failing, Beatrice looked up, met his eyes and remembered

She put up her hands, strove to gather her hair together, it was easy enough to gather its soft masses into a shining rope, but she had no pins, no means of adjusting it.

"Oh, what am I to do and where are we going? Mr. Fleury, I know you meant to be most frightfully kind—but you would have done so much better to leave me where I was."

Her sentence that had begun with a note of mirth trailed off suddenly into something suspicious like a sob. How could she explain to the man who, after all, was little more than a stranger, what the La Lola Beauty Parlor had represented to her—a foothold, precarious enough, but yet a foothold in the world—food, drink, a shelter over her head o'nights

(To Be Continued Monday.)

WORTHY THE NAME OF SIR KNIGHT

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

SIR KNIGHT of the world's oldest order,
You have crossed the strange mystical border,
The ground floor of truth you have won;
You have entered the sanctum sanctorum
Which leads to the temple above.
Where you come as a stone, and a Christ-chosen one,
In the Kingdom of Friendship and Love.

As you stand in this new realm of beauty,
Where each man you meet is your friend,
Think not that your promise of duty
In hall, or asylum, shall end
Outside, in the great world of pleasure,
Beyond, in the clamor of trade,
In the battle of life and its coarse daily strife,
Remember the vows you have made

Your service, majestic and solemn,
Your symbols, regardless and sweet,
Your uniformed phalanx in column
In gala days marching the street;
Your sword and your plumes and your helmet,
Your "secrets" hid from the world's sight;
These things are the small, lesser parts of the all
Which are needed to form the true Knight

The martyrs who perished rejoicing,
In Templary's glorious laws,
Who died—holdst the fagots while voicing
The glory and worth of their cause—
They honored the title of "Templar"
No more than the Knight of to-day,
Who mars not the name with one blemish of shame,
But carries it pleas through life's fray.

To live for a cause; to endeavor
To make your deeds grace it; to try
And uphold its precepts forever,
Is harder by far than to die.
For the battle of life is unending.
The enemy, self, never dies,
And the true Knight must slay that ugly foe every day.
Ere he reaches the heights he desires.

Sir Knight, have you pondered the meaning
Of all you have heard and been told?
Have you strengthened your heart for its weaning
From vices and faults loved of old?
Will you honor, in hours of temptation,
Your promises noble and grand?
Will your spirit be strong to do battle with wrong,
"And, having done all, to stand?"

Will you ever be true to a brother
In actions as well as in creed?
Will you stand by his side as no other
Could stand in the hour of his need?
Will you boldly defend him from peril,
And lift from him poverty's curse?
Will the promise of aid, which you willingly made,
Reach down from your lips to your purse?

The world a battlefield is before you;
Let wisdom walk close by your side,
Let Faith spread her snowy wings o'er you,
Let Truth be your comrade and guide;
Let Fortitude, Justice and Mercy
Direct all your conduct aright,
Be proud fact,
You are worthy the name of "Sir Knight."
And let each word and act tell to men

RECIPES FOR HOUSEWIVES IN THE AUTUMN SEASON

[illegible] salads, sauces and candies can be made with the use of gelatine. Jane M. Eaton, the noted cooking expert, has prepared some exceptionally fine recipes for The Boston American readers.

Recipes For Salads.

Asparagus Salad.—One half box Knox Sparkling Gelatine, one cup cold water, 2 cups weakened vinegar, few slices of onion, three or four cloves, three cups asparagus tips. Soak gelatine in the cold water for minutes. Boil together vinegar, onion and cloves. Strain and pour over the softened gelatine. When jelly is ready to set, add asparagus tips cut in [illegible] inch pieces and pour over individual molds and pour over [illegible] inch with trimmings.

Perfection Salad.—Take one half box of gelatine, one half cup cold water, one half cup mild vinegar, one pint boiling water, four teaspoonfuls salt, one cup finely shredded cabbage, one cup of sliced celery, half cup sugar, two cups celery cut in small pieces and one-quarter cup sweet red pepper cut in fine strips. Soak gelatine in cold water for minutes, add sugar, salt and vinegar, pour on boiling water and stir until dissolved. Strain and when it begins to set add the remaining ingredients. Turn into a wet mold and set away to harden. Serve on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing. Garnish with sliced eggs and sprigs of parsley. Sufficient for one large mold or individual molds.

Tomato Salad.—Make a tomato jelly as in small molds. Drain half a can of tomatoes. Make a thick cream sauce. Dip the chicken and mushrooms into the sauce and let stand until very cold. Put a little cold apple jelly in the bottom of individual molds and when it is firm add the chicken and mushrooms. Now arrange the pieces of chicken and mushrooms in the mold and when all are used, pour in apple jelly to fill the mold. If any apple jelly is left form in little shapes. Arrange a pound of rice in water until tender, then pass it through a sieve and shape like the mold of apple. When cold cover with butter thinned with whipped cream. Set this on the serving dish and invert the apple mold in the center of the rice which is dressed with mayonnaise dressing. Encircle the rice with apple cut in quarters.

Meat or Fish Relish.—Take one quarter box gelatine, one-quarter cup cold water, one half pound cold boil, celery seed and mustard to taste, vinegar and onion juice to make two cups, one-quarter cup vinegar and one quarter cup water. Soak gelatine in cold water and dissolve in hot cup. Add sugar, salt and other ingredients and pour into individual molds.

All Kinds of Jellies

Apple Jelly.—One box gelatine six quart highly sour seed stock sheet, chicken fat consommé, whites and shells of two eggs, one cup cold water, juice of a lemon, one-half cup wine, a bit of bay leaf. Soften the gelatine five minutes in the cold water, then add with the whites beaten slightly the crushed shells and two tablespoonfuls of the stock freed from every particle of fat. Let boil constantly over the fire until the mixture boils, let boil five minutes, after standing ten minutes strain and run through a cheesecloth folded double in a colander.

Lobster Salad in Aspic.—Mold the flesh of a lobster dressed with a little oil, vinegar and cayenne in jelly as above, adding the liquid aspic very slowly so as not to break the pieces of lobster. Put some of the tail into pieces and put these into the mold next to the aspic, an ornament of alternate red and white color, the tail is more attractive than other parts of the fish. Turn the forms on to a bed of lettuce. Garnish the centre of the dish with the shells of the large claws and tail, and between the forms of jelly arrange the small claws. Pass mayonnaise dressing in a separate dish.

Beef Tongue Molded in Aspic Jelly.—Take a layer of aspic jelly one-fourth of an inch in depth form in the bottom of a two quart charlotte mold. Arrange upon this a pattern cut from cold boiled white of an egg and capers, fit in place with a few drops of liquid aspic, then cover with a thin layer of the same. Dip bits of eggs in chilled but liquid aspic and place against the chilled sides of the mold, to which they will adhere. Have ready trimmed, sliced and chilled a very tender boiled ox tongue. Soak gelatine in cold water for jelly, add the aspic, a little at a time, until the liquid is hard in place, then fill with the tongue cut in thin slices.

Aspic Jelly with Extract.—Until box gelatine, three and a half cups cold water, an [illegible] shell of one egg beaten with [illegible] saucepan, a teaspoonful sea cream, a bay leaf, six peppercorns, a stick of celery, a sprig of parsley. Soften the gelatine five minutes in one-half cup cold water, let simmer together all the other ingredients except the beef extract, half an hour, then add the gelatine and extract and strain through a double piece of cheesecloth. Season with salt.

Endive and Orange Salad.—Make a very tart orange jelly and put through ricer. Arrange oranges sliced lengthwise in a mold of endive. Pour over all a French dressing and surround with the orange jelly.

Veal Mousse.—Half box gelatine, one cup cold water, one pint rich stock, well seasoned, one cup cream, one cup chopped stalk of celery, two cups cooks and chopped veal. Soak gelatine in cold water for minutes. Add onion and celery to stock and boil ten minutes. Strain and pour over the softened gelatine. Add lemon juice and when the jelly is beginning to set mold in the veal.

Stuffed Tomatoes in Aspic Jelly.—Have a firm jelly made as in individual molds. Select ripe tomatoes, scald and plunge into cold water. Strip off the skins, cut a small piece from the stem end of each and scoop out the centers. Fill the cups with the following mixture: Chop fine any cold cooked meat, chicken, veal or tongue, season with salt, pepper and mustard, moisten with mayonnaise dressing, and add finely chopped celery. Fill the tomatoes with this mixture, put on the caps and set on ice to chill. Unmold the jelly on a bed of lettuce leaves, put a tomato in the center of each mold and garnish with mayonnaise dressing.

Chicken in Jelly.—Cut and boil gelatine, one-half cup cold water, a chicken, a slice of onion, a bay leaf, six peppercorns, three sticks of celery. Soften the gelatine five minutes in cold water, cook the chicken in boiling water until tender, then remove the skin and meat from the bones, cut in dice and return to the same pan with the vegetables and gelatine and a little salt; reduce to a quart; then add the yolks of two eggs, well beaten, and cook a minute. Strain and pour a little of the jelly in a mold. Set again in a cold place to harden. Arrange the chicken and celery leaves or parsley.

Cream Filling for Cake.—Scald one pint milk; beat the yolks of two eggs and add a quarter of a cup of milk and one-third cup sugar and when well mixed add to the milk in the hot bath until the mixture thickens. Remove from fire and add a level tablespoonful gelatine that has been soaked five minutes in one-fourth cup cold milk; strain, and when cool and beginning to thicken, beat thoroughly and spread upon the cake

Danderine

GROWS HAIR and we can PROVE IT!

A lady from Minnesota writes:
As a result of using Danderine, my hair is close to five feet in length."

Beautiful Hair At Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grown, and alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no more good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful than the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to succeed. It is grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up, or because its supply of moisture or nutriment, when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost proper nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions).

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should Knowlton's Danderine has a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities.

One 25-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great merits as a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

THE MEGAPHONE MAN IN WINTHROP

SCENE—Columbia Square, Winthrop.

TIME—Next Tuesday.

RUBBERNECK wagon stops near Soldiers' monument.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Look out for paint! They have been sticking up things for our visit. That soldier on the pedestal has just been given a new coat of bronze. I should think they would patronize a fellow townsman and use some of Charlie Kimball's metal polish upon it.

INQUISITIVE SOUTHERNER — What place did you say this was?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Winthrop, sir. Winthrop—bounded on the North by the unlimited expanse of the mighty Atlantic, on the South by the bigger and busier, on the West by arid wastes and on the east by "Down Duck." We can view things very well from this elevation.

OMAHA JAIL OFFICER—Why do they speak of Deer Island as "Down Duck"?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Shirley Gut that name up on it.

(Chorus of "Did you ever?")

MAN (with spy glass)—What's that big tank over on yonder hill?

MEGAPHONE MAN—That is the reserve water supply. That tank holds about two hundred and fifty thousand gallons.

EASTPORT MERCHANT — Any other tanks around here?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Well, yes. You see they have a lot of tanks over to Deer Island, but they have to keep 'em locked up.

PROVIDENCE CLERGYMAN — I was always interested in your islands about here.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Yes, they are interesting. There's Apple Island over yonder. It's a pippin. Farther down is Snake Island. I went fishing off there once and got stung. Course they named Deer Island on account of the fact that there used to be lots of deer there. In fact there are several hundred bucks there now. Always close season there, too. There is one house on that island that is the queerest place you ever saw. If you happen to make a mistake your in for a correction.

PRETTY GOTHAM GIRL—I should just love to see a town meeting. Do they hold them here?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Yes, Miss. Right inside that door. There goes Alfred Pinkesbury, the man on the bike. He's generally moderator. Least he was at the last one a few days ago.

PRETTY GOTHAM GIRL—What did they do?

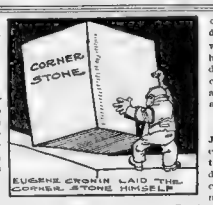
MEGAPHONE MAN—I wasn't there but I understand that they discussed how to keep Jack Meisel from wandering along Temple avenue at the Highlands, so much, and debated at length concerning the reason why Dr. John J. Gibbons is so taken up with Pauline street.

PITTSBURG KNOCKER — Eligible bachelors, eh?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Bet your life. There's Bill Curran, too. There he goes along on the other side of the square near the library. Bill is one of the most eligible bachelors in this here. He can talk, too. His intimates call him, "The live wire." You ought to hear him sing, "I'm a Member of the Midnight Crew." Say t'would melt the heart of a gooseberry. Bill has just moved from Pleasant street to Marshall street. That's why you see so many young ladies going in the latter direction

PLATTSBURG MILLINER—He's met some one.

MEGAPHONE MAN—You're right. That is Frank Leach, one of the best down this way. Frank has a host of friends. He's a T Wharf fish merchant and rated wealthy. That other man coming across the square is Pat Campbell, sub-master of the Boston Latin School. Pat has just built a bungalow at Unity, Maine, bought a motor boat and been blessed with a new baby. That's going some. He bear out his reputation of being a practicing attorney, of course. You see he is getting used to doling out justice.



ANTI-RACE SUICIDE WARRIOR —Here comes a fine, large family out for a drive.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Yes—That is David J. Mahoney, who lives at Number 33 on this avenue. "Dave" is but forty-three, but he has quite a number of children, and he takes his family driving every afternoon, no matter what business demands are made upon him. His interesting mare, "Kate," draws the vehicle. She is as safe as can be. Say, you could tie "Kate" to a bag of oats and she'd never run away).

(Car reaches Hutchinson street)

MEGAPHONE MAN (pointing)—John S. Foley lives in yonder domicile. John is a wonder when it comes to making improvements. He put down that concrete walk, built the concrete steps, constructed that dormer window on the roof, and never lost a day from his Boston letter carrying route doing it either. Jack is a hustler for his inches, and has a host of friends too.

NERVOUS WOMAN—Just look at that auto go.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Aha. That is Chemical 2, the new piece of fire apparatus. The men are giving it a practice spin up Winthrop street. Wonder how that fellow at the wheel would like to be chauffeur of the new six thousand dollar road roller? One thing is certain there'll be less tire expense for the town with the road roller than there will with the fire truck.

LOVER OF HORSES—There's a fine rig. No check rein either.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Right. The man holding the reins is Big Bill Kelleher. One thing is certain if the Arabian proverb is correct, namely: "God will mind the look of thy horse," then William ought to take a celestial blue ribbon. Loves horses and loves little children, too. I saw him with both and know.

NORTHAMPTON MASTER OF HOUNDS—Hello! here comes a horseman

MEGAPHONE MAN—Aha—glad we met with Attorney William H. Barter, of Birch Road. Look at that equine. Glance at that rider. Are not both the real thing? Here comes Mrs. Barger, too, mounted as well. Captain Jenks of the horse marines wasn't in it with Barter, when it comes to making a his astride a horse. Whap! look out, there!—Hurrah. Look how he took his stepper by.

GARAGE PROPRIETOR—(As dust cloud passes)—What was that whizzed by?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Doctor Ben Metcalf, I reckon. You couldn't see his auto nor him, but he was certainly there. He has a hospital of his own so he knows he will be admitted if anything happens.

(Auto nears Fort Heath)

MEGAPHONE MAN—Before we pass by the fort, I want to point out Fred Tenney's house on Floyd street at the left. This is a great town for famous athletes. Captain Bill Sweeney lives down here, too. Then Jimmy Gardiner, the boxer, is located over on Pleasant Park Road. He stands high with the nobility, for he puts up dukes. Fred Tenney, you know, used to play first for the Boston Nationals, was sold to New York and finally to the Lowell team of the New England League. Fred can go out of his house over there any day and make the circuit, getting home after the conductor has cried "Fare," or he can catch a fowl in his own yard. Once Fred wasn't feeling any too well and after he had somewhat recovered he went over to the beach for a dip. He was ready to plunge in when a friend shouted: "I want to see you sa.ke now!" Do you know Fred has never spoken to that fellow since.

KANSAS SINGING INSTRUCTOR (as song is heard.) What a magnificent voice!

MEGAPHONE MAN—Surely so. That is J. K. Murray, the famous Belleview avenue. There's Tom Barry too. Say, Tom is about one of the best looking fellows that Winthrop has heard of. Just look at that color in his cheeks. Wouldn't the girls just love to have that, hey?

(Car passes over toward Fort Rodman)

MEGAPHONE MAN—Here is the Battery station of the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Road. Its of recent construction and will prove a boon for this locality. Yonder is the entrance to the fort.

JACKSONVILLE VET—What sorter swamp angel have they got here?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Thirteen inch mortars. They will carry fifteen miles. It's a regular shell game.

NERVOUS CREATURE—I should hate to live near here.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Most people like it. You see they march the band around the town playing popular airs and then the people know that they must open the windows of their residence so that the glass won't be shattered by the concussion. One would think that this was a town of family jars, but it isn't so. The shells would remind you of nothing so much as a frightened woman. They screech like the dickens

NANTUCKET NATIVE (anxiously)—Course no one gets shot.

MEGAPHONE MAN—No—or—but I've seen one or two who were half—Not soldier boys, or residents here, you understand.

CHORUS OF MEN—Oh—sure—outsiders of course

MEGAPHONE MAN—Here we are now off for Point Shirley way. There is Selectman William Rasby. He is a Boston builder, and he is converting the old North Church in Boston. That other man is George E. Mourtos, the Boston tourist agent, who lives on Sagamore avenue. That tall man going along toward Temple avenue is Albert Bussey, who has the finest truck garden in this town. Say, he's been a good pal in your mouth yonder! Eugene Somerby, who lives on Grover avenue. He has a big produce store in Boston and is a shipper. He's a knowing looking man, I'm sure. The letter carrier is John Hogan. He lives over on Crest avenue.

William J. Hunter, Jr., who is the son of Frank Dunkless of the police department. Sergeant Frank is the crack shot of the force. Only had to use his gun once or so, but they say the dog he aimed at has a likely chance of dying of old age

(A MISS OF THIS FOUR and he is guilty-three if he is a sinner. Who's that fellow?

MEGAPHONE MAN—That smart looking young man is Wilson Healey, who while not an out an outer, still can design a house with the best of them.

"They say that he always gets extra room and the extra cost hasn't scared off his customers. That looks like Healey to me. There's Pleasant street and that distinguished appearing person is Dr. James J. Mulloy. Never realize he was fifty-nine, would you? (To chauffeur) Hit her up there, Billy. The store over yonder is kept by Washington Snelling, who sells all kinds of hardware. This big grocery place belongs to Winthrop Magee, who was for years on the board of selectmen. There goes Deputy United States Marshal James C. Buhl. He lives down on Beach Road. That aged man is Captain John Flanagan, of Shirley—and he is guilty-three if he is a sinner. Hurrah! Here comes the new electric to the point.

(Clubhouse crowd survey car and Lodge again with the cream and lemon drops. They are all pure and strictly sour, put up in [illegible] half ounce packages. We [illegible] every package I give away—I'm looking you this time! Fact is I pass around to collect the needful. Twenty-five cents each please. I wish I could run this auto on wind

INDIGNANT VOICE—Where we going. What's we see?

MEGAPHONE MAN—I'll show you where Taft's famous hostelry once stood. Mine Host Taft, ladies and gentlemen, was a wonder. He could put twenty different kinds of game on his tables at one time. When he served plover out of season, he put 'em on the menu as "Owls from the North." Some Harvard students once labelled some of his delicious cheese—"45 B. C." He was one of the old school. They don't have hotel men like him nowadays. His pet dish was English turbot, and that fish he always served himself, bringing it to the table for his guests with his own hands (and it the "King of the Sea."

WESTERNER (That wasn't President Taft.

MEGAPHONE MAN—No, sir—but he was just as big hearted—and just as dignified—a courtly gentleman of proven worth. Thank you for your additional fee, sir. Thank you, madam.

PENUROUS PARTY—You must make or let or money.

MEGAPHONE MAN—No, sir. I can hardly make both ends meet. Isn't it warm? Sorry, sir—but that's a lead quarter. Keep it for the church offerings. I'll soon be able to show you how the tide rang through Shirley Gut. It's got Niagara faded for the hundred yards water championship.

MIKE was a good Irishman who went into the army. He was fond of the life, but liked to sneak out of camp after dark for a little beer.

One night he came sneaking back to camp and the guard challenged him when his form loomed up, silhouetted against the moon. Mike tried his best to get by the lone sentry, but the latter espied him and called out in a ringing voice: "Halt! Who goes there?"

Mike, a little muddled, but with the usual Irish sense of humor, replied, "How?"

"Halt! Who goes there?" came back the sentry.

"Gineral Grant!" answered Mike very quickly.

"Give the correct countersign or I'll fire. "Who goes there, I say?" stormed the guard.

"I said it was Gineral Gr-r-ant," came back Mike.

The guard came at Mike in the dark with a rush and brought his musket down on Mike's head with an awful smash. Mike was picked up and carted off to the hospital. The sentry followed the van, and to his great amazement saw that it was his best friend Mike whom he had cracked over the head.

"For th' love av hiven, Moike, phwy didn't yez tell me phwat yez game was whin Oi asked ye?"

"An' sure, Dinny, if ye would do this to Gineral Gr-r-ant, phwat the divil would ye have done to the loikes o' me?" was Mike's feeble reply.

JERRY MULLIGAN had been blown up by a dynamite blast and suffered the loss of his right hand. His friend Pat came to the hospital, and, sitting beside the cot, said:

"Oh, Jerry; 'tis an awful thing that such an accident should happen to ye. To think that the loikes of you should meet wid such a dreadful misfortune."

"Sure, an' Pat, it might have been worse," groaned Jerry.

"Phwat could be worse than losing your good right hand, Jerry?"

"I'll till yes phwat might have been worse, Pat," answered poor Jerry. "Suppose Oi had had me week's wages in me roight hand!"

MISS MURRAY IN "MADAME SHERRY."

DAN SWEENEY got a job in a drug store. He wasn't quite up to our ways, but he managed to look wise, and there wasn't much that got by him. One day a man walked into the store and said, pleasantly:

"Give me ten cents' worth of bird seed. I'd like it in a hurry, please."

The Irishman drew himself up to his full height and remained motionless. The customer waited for a few moments and then, in a vexed way, said:

Ten cents' worth of bird seed, if you please. I'm in a hurry."

Not a move out of the Irishman.

"My good man, do you intend to wait on me?" angrily inquired the customer. "I WANT TEN CENTS' WORTH OF BIRD SEED! Did you hear me?"

Then, slowly and wisely the Irishman began:

"Sure me good man, Oi heard ye. Oi heard ye the first time as well as the lasht. It's me that won't be jollied by the loikes of ye. Sure, 'tis me that knows quite well that birds grow from eggs and not from seeds."

DENNIS MALLOY came to this country when a young man and made a fortune in a short time. Dennis had high ideas and wanted to be a real society bug, so he asked a friend the best way to butt in

The friend advised him to join a swell country club, and Dennis did. There was a gun club attached to the organization, and Dennis purchased for himself a swell shot-gun. On the day he made his first hunting trip he was togged out like Emperor William. He hunted nearly the whole day and didn't get a shot at anything. He was wending his way home, pretty sore, when on turning a bend in the road he saw a bluebird perched on the limb of a tree that stood by a tiny brook.

Dennis brought the gun to his shoulder and let fly both barrels. He tore for the spot when the smoke had cleared and looked under the tree for his blue-plumed victim, but there was no sign of the bird. He had hunted several minutes when he spied a frog perched in the weeds at the foot of the tree. He stood looking down at it a while rubbing his chin thoughtfully. Then he stooped, picked up the frog, and holding it by one hind leg, said:

"He gobs, an' ye wor a foine lookin' bird before Oi shot th' feathers off ye!"

AN old Irish lady went to a vaudeville show with her daughter Mary. When they came in a conjuror was on the boards. He was performing the trick of reading newspapers through cloth. He would hold a piece of cloth over a paper and read the happenings of the day. He seemed very clever. Finally, he took up a thick piece of flannel and, exhibiting it to his audience, said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I am now going to read a newspaper through four folds of this piece of flannel."

As he accomplished this task the old Irish lady became greatly excited and, tugging her daughter by the arm, said: "Come on, Mary; 'tis us that will have this place at wanst. Sure 'tis no place for dacint women folks wearin' thin calico dhresses."

PRESIDENT TAFT is certainly a great man for vacations. When he finishes one he goes back to Washington, makes a touch and starts on another. All the time he's eating his way from town to town. I think it would be cheaper to keep him in Washington and send his meals in.

IF a poor man is arrested and hasn't money enough to hire a lawyer, the judge gives him one free; and you know the kind of lawyer the court gives him—one of those lawyers who has been practicing for fifty years and hasn't won a case yet. That's why so many men plead guilty even when they're innocent. They'd rather go to jail, for if they took a chance on the lawyer the court gives 'em they might be hung.

NO more college boy sweethearts for mine! The last one I had, my, but he was stingy! One night he came around to the stage door and said:

It's a lovely night for a walk."

It may be all you say," said I, "but I've been dancing for three solid hours, and I'm going to ride."

So we hailed a taxicab, and you should have seen the way he kept his eyes glued to the meter. Every time it registered ten cents his love for me dropped about ten degrees. When it got up to a dollar he was almost speechless.

"You mustn't think I'm stingy," he said at last; "I'm saving for a rainy day."

"From the way you act," I said, "I thought you were saving for a flood."

WALLINGFORD is far from favorably impressed with Battlesburg at first sight, and complains that there isn't a live one in the town—that the town isn't sleeping but dead. Of a sudden his eyes light on the pretty stenographer in the hotel office.

You don't live in this town, do you?"

Yes, sir."

What is it—a promise or a bet?

WALLINGFORD—Where's the fellow who sells auto mobiles here?

MIRANDA—If folks must marry, why can't they stick to York county stock?

Jane—If they did there'd be precious few marriages.

Miranda—So much the better. See how this one turned out—seven children and a farm mortgaged up to the handle.

REBECCA—I haven't done anything but put babies to bed at night and take them up in the morning for years and years. But it's all finished—I mean, our family's finished—all over and done with. BAS-RELIEF OF CLEOPATRA AT THE TEMPLE OF DENDERAH. THE ONLY PORTRAIT IN EXISTENCE.

THE PARIS STOCK EXCHANGE, IN VIEW OF WHICH CLEOPATRA NOW LIES BURIED

Paris, October 6.

ASTONISHING to relate, the remains of Cleopatra, Egypt's immortal Queen, lie buried in the little garden of the French National Library in Paris, within a stone's throw of the Stock Exchange, with nothing to mark their resting place.

The fact was discovered by M. Noel Monis, a distinguished French man of letters. He noticed in the little-visited cabinet of medals of the Library a beautiful sarcophagus. He learned that it was the sarcophagus of Cleopatra. He learned that her mummy was not in it. He inquired persistently what had become of it.

At last he found out. The sarcophagus containing the mummy was brought to France early in the nineteenth century, when Egypt was plundered recklessly by Europeans. It was placed on exhibition in the cabinet of medals of the Library, a government institution. There the illustrious mummy reposed for many years in obscurity.

Then came the Franco-German war. The invaders surrounded Paris and the terrible Commune broke out within the city. The director of the Library and his colleagues, fearful that their art treasures might suffer at the hands of the Germans or the Communists, tried to hide some of them.

They carried Cleopatra's sarcophagus into the deepest cellar and covered it with earth and rubbish. A year later, when peace and order were entirely restored, they brought it up to daylight again and placed it on exhibition.

In a short time the mummy of the most fascinating woman in all history developed most unpleasant peculiarities. Strange and unusual worms crawled forth from it. Two keepers of the room fell seriously ill. Even two thousand years after her death the serpent of old Nile was working mischief. Decay in a strange and unheard-of form had attacked the mummy. It has been suggested that the poison of the asp, whose bite ended Cleopatra's life, had affected the body in such a way that the embalming process which it underwent did not accomplish its usual results and preserve the body from decay. As her death occurred when the Roman soldiers were just invading the country, the embalm-

Open Air Motherhood

Babies Who Are Born in "Birth Arbors" Built in a Garden—and Who Seldom See the Inside of a House

One of the Little Boynton Boys in Summer Costume.

ALL over this country more and more people are living the outdoor life. There are on sale everywhere window devices which enable you to sleep with your head outdoors, comfortably, the year round. Tuberculosis is being prevented, and, in its early stages, cured by this means.

The more people live outdoors the [illegible] covering [illegible] and [illegible] reform. Many indoor clothes are dreadfully modern, evening clothing as too cumbersome. Mrs. Boynton and Her Latest Baby, Outside of the Arbor in Which It Was Born.

Mrs. Florence Treadwell Boynton, in Her Favorite Outdoor Costume

By Florence Treadwell Boynton

IN the arbor, built by my own hands in my garden my first little one was received—a beautiful, perfect girl baby weighing 11½ pounds.

It was early June, and I was not quite by Nature's own instinct to breeds, my little Benjamin Boynton first saw the light of day in a bed of ferns, as a boon companion. Two of his brothers had enjoyed the privilege of this same arbor as nativity, as a fit beginning for [illegible] existence.

They have escaped all the usual ills of babyhood, [illegible] are models of physical and mental health, with spirits the envy of [illegible] I have no fears for little Benjamin. Already he shows that he loves his leafy home, and [illegible] for laughter when sunbeams [illegible] their way through the foliage. What makes the food and wash of his earliest home, [illegible] too, barring accidents, will develop as God intends children to develop, first into strong and healthy animals and then into complete men and women.

I had been away, traveling, [illegible] time came when my arbor [illegible] and I hurried home to it, find I was [illegible] health and happiness, filled with joy and perfect confidence. The arbor welcomed me with its abundant shade—for, with my own hands [illegible] planted every vine, watered and cared for them when they were little, [illegible] their dainty tendrils to climb and twine, while my little ones played about in the garden or built sand houses in the arbor, for the floor of the arbor is of white beach sand.

So, in the arbor I had my couch placed, in the warm, sunlit air. Here I studied, as I awaited the arrival, dreamed, received my friends, played and chatted with my children, dined the occasional guest, planned and built air castles with my husband during the long moonlit evenings—awaiting the arrival of little Benjamin.

Meanwhile the couch was prepared and all things made ready for the doctor and the nurse, a basket for the [illegible] expected one, screens and curtains and a canopy for the bed—for the mother's eyes must be as safely guarded from the sun as the infant's. For delicacy of the mother's eyes tell [illegible] her back to care for the infant's. She [illegible] us of her breaks how to protect [illegible] delicate body.

I have mentioned little Benjamin's weight—birth—11½ pounds. In the [illegible] weeks since he has averaged a pound of a pound daily. His [illegible] good appetite. He holds up his head and turns over in his bed without assistance. And he has never yet been within the four walls of a house.

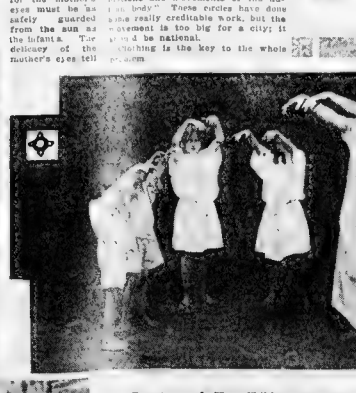
Strange for the baby, but for the mother, also, the arbor is a great success. Just before the birth I received a [illegible] injury, and afterward he was seriously ill for [illegible] I know a quick pick recovery, which I credit to the arbor, with its constant circulation of natural breezes, and to its provision for daily sun baths.

Mr. Boynton and I wish to cooperate with all parents who have as their chief object in life the moral, mental and physical development of their children. In order to stimulate a great national parental activity for the benefit of all children—realizing that nothing permanent can be accomplished by isolation and that a national activity must affect not only your child and my child but every [illegible] child.

Two years ago I was called to Berkeley by the Federated Mothers' Clubs to speak for the establishment of four circles that were in search of [illegible] solutions and a fifth circle for the finding of the "normal natural motions and movements of the human body." These circles have done some really creditable work, but the movement is too big for a city; it should be national.

Clothing is the key to the whole problem.

"At ten weeks little Benjamin can sit up and turn over."



Mrs. Boynton and Her Children Exercising with "Normal, Natural Movements of the Human Body."

Look at the mountains, the woods, with its waterfalls, and the ferns, rocked slope, green and mossy; the beautiful fields; the noble solitary moss hung oak; the booming sea shore.

We do not want people cut from fashion books and pasted on these scenes, but man, women and children that are the real beings in harmony with and entering into and enjoying the various moods of their mother nature, with the birds and the winds and the rain. Clothes, houses, furnishings, tables, dishes, style, fashion are not all of life. Let us live according to the style of the land, not the style of the people of the land.

Garments? What are they for? To keep us warm and to make us comfortable and incidentally to be as simple and beautiful as possible, beautiful in simplicity, form and color, garments that leave us free to be, or, garments that leave us free to be natural and work according to the laws of our physical construction.

Mrs. Florence Treadwell Boynton, in Her Favorite Outdoor Costume

[illegible] and gardening [illegible] with [illegible] The walls [illegible] expect [illegible] of the borers [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] the fairly food can be raised in a [illegible] patch. Look [illegible] with the grateful whistle [illegible] of the little Athens [illegible] for dancing in games.

It is not necessary that all women of a country be mothers. But it is necessary that all children of a country be mothered and cared for in the best possible way. And the women of the country can be the spirit of the country and inspire this.

I would have the spirit of American [illegible] down their work; I would simplify housework by making all necessary work a gymnastic exercise making the [illegible] by [illegible] symmetrical clothes. I would simplify cooking and have the object of each meal [illegible] nutrition made palatable, instead of first consulting the palate and second nutrition.

Making Housework an Art.

I would substitute sleeping porches for bed rooms, porches for dining rooms screened porches for kitchens.

I would simplify needlework and make comfort, beauty and symmetry the object of clothing. I would eliminate all objects purely ornamental and make the objects of use, such as dish pans, sinks and wash tubs, much more symmetrical. I would beautify housework making dishwashing an art, sweeping and washing a beautiful fresh air exercise this will make it possible when women dress correctly.

The dress of the American woman should be American, not Grecian. We are not Greeks. What are Americans? A combination of all nations. Then all nations are our ancestors and we may take from any the garments we like best. Surely the Grecian is nearest perfect. Let us begin with that and from that construct a dress of our own.

By dressing the body as a soul we get our bearings. Dress the body as a soul and let it serve as one would a thermometer or test, for where the soul is called it cannot be in harmony if its surrounding is false, artificial and unnatural. The true home or home would be a home of the soul.

A body could stay in a house all day and content itself with man-made comforts and pictures of nature, but a soul longs for fire-giving, soul-giving, spirit-giving air; the blue sky and clouds; the living, breathing trees; the fields shimmering in the wind and sun, the Godlike power of the swelling waves.

We could put a body in a room with four walls to sleep and surround it with all the luxuries made by man, but a soul would sleep out under the stars in communion with the glory and [illegible] of the heavens. The best things of life cost nothing, and the soul longs to come in contact with the soul of all nature.

We are not the only nation that deforms its feet with shoes. We are inclined to think the Chinese are alone in this [illegible] manufactured in America [illegible] that does not [illegible] and that does not [illegible] of walking impossible.

If a little female infant is allowed full use of her baby feet it is [illegible] of life to [illegible] children run barefooted as much as the style of natural feet until the consequent natural conditions.

What waste [illegible] keeping our children dancing a soul since the object is impossible and defeated in advance!

Why do we send our boys to [illegible] school [illegible] in hopes that they may become less awkward. Why do we send our girls [illegible] in hopes that they may become graceful in action and [illegible]

We should teach the [illegible] motion. But what is poor, [illegible] Motion is a soul [illegible] the [illegible] the body was created [illegible] to make by.

The natural mother of children like the natural mother of young animals can teach her little ones in a home [illegible] with games and songs and dancing. In running and scurrying and jumping and climbing the child learns the rest.

Would you put shoes on a squirrel and say climb a tree, or on a fawn and say run swiftly, or a corset on a fawn and say glide gracefully? Why do all this to the human animal?

All this is from a woman and a mother. What do the men—and the fathers—think about it? One of them, my husband, answers thus:

"Mrs. Boynton's ideas are the natural product of her attitude toward life and I can best answer this question by relating a few typical incidents illustrative of this attitude.

"We had not been made man and wife before Mrs. Boynton informed me that it was her desire to be the mother of at least six children. With this view we married, although we did not have $200 between us, and I had attended my last college lecture but a few weeks before.

Her Husband Approves.

"There were some elements about the outlook that were, to me, a little fearful; but the young lady I was to marry had supreme trust, was courageous and mentally willing to step down from the comfort of her own life into the harness by my side, and I had had the experience of supporting myself while in [illegible] university and the Law College; and we both felt that it was best for each of us that we marry then and work out this one problem together as husband and wife.

"We married and hardly more than ten months thereafter our first baby came and the other five have since come along at quite regular intervals; and every year, and I may almost say every month, our life has been successively happier than the one preceding.

"With the exception of a trip with me through the Pattern States last Winter, and a day on horseback through the Napa Valley, which she and I spent some three years ago in search of a country home for the Summer, Mrs. Boynton, since the coming of our first baby, has not been separated a single week from any of our children."

I let my children run barefooted for the sake of natural feet."

it we may live in harmony with environment and be as free in action as the bird.

Have we not all dreamed of flying? believe it is not flying we dream of at the lost agility of motion of the race, for when I dance, or run, or swim, I experience all the joy of my flying dreams, the joy of active motion, which motoring or sailing or flying machines (partially passive motion) cannot give, they give only nervous exhilaration, that we crave more and more, as drink to excess.

Our movements are limited, restricted, muffled by the clothes we wear. Dress us in the fashion of the day and we assume the attitude and movements of the fashion plates of the day.

Therefore, I have endeavored to invent garments for my children that allow all the natural, unfettered movements of the body, which allow the air to circulate freely to and to contact with the surface of the whole body. These garments are graceful in line and so simple and easy to make that the children can assist the mother in making them and can easily be made by the child, reviewed by the mother while in the afternoon sitting in the garden. They are easily washed by the children, as they require no starch and no ironing.

And here we are in the garden. I love my garden, mainly because I planted and tended nearly every plant there. Here again is environment, setting. See the mother play-

Mystery of Some Women's Hair

A RATHER delicate [illegible] discussed in a recent issue of the London Lancet and British Medical Journal the mystery of the origin of many women's and girls' glorious locks which they decorate their windows? It asks.

Black hair, it may be conjectured, comes from the South, and in this connection the Journal quotes from Mr Francis Trollope's "Summer in Brittany," a description of a hair market at a Fair at Chateaulin:

"The various parts of the motley crowd [illegible] three or four different parts [illegible] chasers of human hair, who travel the country for the purpose of attending the fairs and buying the tresses of the peasant girls. They have particularly the most and frequently in the greatest abundance.

"We saw several girls shaved one after the other, like sheep, and as many more standing ready for the shears, with their caps in their hands, and their long hair combed out, and hanging down to their waists. Some of the operators were men and some women. By the side of the dealer was placed a large basket, into which every successive crop of hair, tied up into a wisp by itself, was thrown."

THE British aristocracy and members of fashionable society want to stop irreverent newspaper photographers from making snapshots of them.

They are going to make a beginning at the race courses. Racing and watching the races is the principal occupation of the British aristocracy. Everybody who is anybody and his wife, or somebody else's wife, go to all the races.

If you watch the race courses carefully you will gain a fine idea of what is going on in British society.

Now [illegible] photographers [illegible] the private [illegible]

"What will the King and Queen [illegible] when they see you parading [illegible] off with this widely staged crea[illegible] the Duchess continued.

The Duke's explanations were not [illegible] and hardly interrupted [illegible] tirades of the indignant Duchess for a moment.

"Don't you know that every horrible person in London will be talking about the picture and making fun of you and me.

"You might as well go and sit arm in arm with her in the middle of Trafalgar Square and then be photographed!

"It isn't you see enough of her in Paris and in London without picking out a place where your own friends and family were about you!"

The Duke hurried round to the Jockey Club and explained how he had been insulted, injured, wronged and worried, all because the club allowed any common photographer to walk in and photograph him at a moment when he oughtn't to be photographed.

The Duke was not the only one who felt sore. All sorts of persons, from earl and countesses downward, had complained.

As a rule, it was a husband who had been revealed to his wife and a cruel world as amusing himself in company with the wrong partner. In some cases, however, it was the wife who objected to having her particular friendships made known. Evidently the British aristocracy has a vast number of friendships it does not care to have published.

Complaints were made on the ground that the snapshots did not make the subjects look dignified. One earl remarked that none of these hasty pictures made him look at all like an Earl, and therefore, they were calculated to lower the prestige of the hereditary peerage in the eyes of the people. In one picture, for instance, he was shown running through the rain with his coat collar turned up and his hat jammed down on the back of his head, looking not unlike the usual British workman out of work.

When these snapshots are gathered together, the chief impression they create, apart from any domestic irregularities, is that the upper classes are a very unornamental lot. Most of them wear perfectly idiotic grins. There is Prince Alexander of Teck, a brother of Queen Mary, laughing to split his sides, with Lady Keppel, a connection of the famous Mrs. George Keppel. Not at all an imposing picture!

All these remarks had had some effect on the Jockey Club, but when the Duke complained, that settled the matter. A duke's feelings are much more sensitive than anybody else's, so the order went forth that the photographers were to be excluded from the members' enclosures at the English race courses.

But this will not stop photographing the nighty.

Will the photographers be excluded from public gatherings, army reviews, having of cornerstones, railway stations, sporting events other than races and the various other ceremonies where royalty, aristocracy and celebrities of Great Britain gather? Hardly.

Queen Mary herself believes that the royal family and the aristocracy as well should show themselves to the public on all occasions, and allow themselves to be photographed as well. She holds that they should not behave as if they had something to be ashamed of, but should set an example of uprightness to those less fortunately situated than themselves.

There are a good many people at Newport and at other fashionable resorts in America who would like to suppress photographers, but fortunately they have not the power to do so. American society, of course, has not the same cause for feeling ashamed of itself as the British aristocracy, and it would be a most unfortunate thing if any small, unrepresentative clique of Americans should give the impression that society was afraid to be seen in the light of day.

Mr. Harry Lehr, for instance, the leader of the "Circus" or "Monkey Set" at Newport, frequently shows a strong dislike to being photographed. Mr. Lehr loves to be gossipped about in the newspapers in a general way, but probably does not like the truthful snapshot, which reveals him as a commonplace, fat-faced, small-eyed man, with none of the remarkable features which fancy unassisted might give him.

But few of our society leaders are as sensitive to the snapshotter as Mr. Lehr. Mrs. Ava Astor, Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt, Mrs. Elsie Vanderbilt, all of them distinguished ornaments to society, smile happily in the face of the camera, and the result is a pleasing one.

It does us a great deal of good to know that the Astors and Vanderbilts look very much like ordinary people, that they take a sea bath or a walk in the park occasionally and are quite human in other ways.

"BEATING ELI[illegible]

How "Connie" Warren, with Her Own Aeroplane (and, Maybe, an Astor Romance) and Four Years of Athletic Triumphs Is Thrusting Strenuous "Bobby" Sears Into Second Place

Miss Warren hidden in her big bonnet going in for a swim at Bailey's Beach

"BOBBY" SEARS, of Boston—the celebrated Miss Sears of society who makes a point of doing most thing that "man can do"—went up with Grahame White in the aeroplane.

But just wait! "Connie" Warren is having an aeroplane of her own built, and she's going to be her own aviator!

Well, won't that hold "Bobby" Sears for a while?

It's all over Boston—everybody's talking about it. For, in Boston, it is almost sacrilege for any other girl to presume to rival Elinor Sears. Yet for four years there has existed a friendly rivalry between the Boston society girl and George Henry Warren's daughter with respect to the sort of deeds that win and lose laurels for the gentler sporting sex.

This rivalry began when Miss Warren threw down the gauntlet to Miss Sears by appearing one morning at the New York Horse Show in riding togs and challenging the latter to daring deeds on horseback. The two girls rode splendid animals and jumped splendidly, but the blue went to Miss Sears, and at that moment Miss Warren vowed to get even, if it took years.

Whenever "Bobby" performs an unusual feat "Connie" immediately equals Honors were fairly even until Miss Warren took her famous swim from Bailey's Beach to the Forty Steps, a distance of two miles through rock filled waters, where dangerous eddies have drawn more than one swimmer to death.

But before that feat was performed Miss Warren put herself through a course of training which would have dismayed many a football player. Everything she has done for the last four years has been but a leading up to that swim.

After her defeat at the New York Horse Show she went in for a course of cross-country riding on Long Island. When she was able to keep in line with Malcolm Stevenson and Devereaux Milburn she knew that she could compete with her rival on equal terms.

The next Summer, under "Pat" Collier's supervision, she rode to hounds three times a week, and before the season closed had completely outridden Miss Sears.

And then Miss Sears woke up and realized that "Connie" meant business. And, figuratively speaking, she buckled on her armor and went forth to war.

Will the fight be to the swift or will it be to the strong?

Miss Sears first came before the public as an athlete eight years ago. Miss Warren has in four years capped all her performances, a record to be proud of! Long before her debut the Boston girl won the name of "Bobby" Sears. She was the terror of Commonwealth avenue and Beacon Hill at the time that her rival was studying the languages and mathematics in the schoolroom. The day that "Bobby" Sears hitched her bobsled onto a passing sleigh and coasted through the heart of Boston, that proper Puritan town raised eyes to heaven and wailed for her.

That was four years after the event that the contest began. It extended the width of the Continent for the Pacific Coast had a number of Boston guests a few months [illegible] and every one was eagerly rumored the feats of the deadly rivals.

It has been said more than once that Miss Warren admits that she has a certain greatness for her art. She is going to get at 9 o'clock after a simple supper of bread and cream and fruit when all the girls in her set were dining sumptuously and taking great gaily. She has even left the cheerful girls and men on their way home from dances have caught glimpses of the strenuous "Connie" mowing her father's lawn chaperoned by the rising sun.

And one man fell a victim to her opposition. He was Cyril Hatch, tennis player of note and some athlete, but he fell down on those grass-grown steps panting and prostrate. Miss Connie took the mower, the heavy iron monster, and fairly pranced through the operation, finishing the twenty-second mile before Hatch had finished puffing and blowing.

In the beginning Newport and Miss Sears did not take the rising athlete seriously. But now all has changed. Mr. Hatch was not the only man to succumb to Miss Warren. When she was practicing for her twenty-mile walk, she used to trot around the cliff walk, a mere [illegible] distance and a half miles before breakfast. After a week, she walked there and back seven times.

A very elegant person one day offered to walk with her. He was Henri Marchin, the Beau Brummel of the Diplomatic corps. It took his valet one hour to prepare him for the [illegible]. At 8:30 the couple started out bravely; they climbed rocks and jumped sand heaps, the little attaché kept up manfully for the first lap. On the second he was pink-cheeked; on the third, as they rounded the marble house, he was puffing and breathless, and at the end of the fourth he sank gracefully to rest in front of the breakers, a sad heap of purple silk socks, purple silk necktie, white flannels and blond hair.

The athletic Miss Warren offered him a shoulder and patted him encouragingly. But it was no use. The Beau Brummel painfully arose and walked toward town, leaving Miss Connie victorious. She finished the walk and never told the sad story of the diplomat's undoing. With two masculine scalps hanging from her belt Miss Warren was competent to vie with her rival.

Just after the Martin incident Miss Sears ordered her two hundred mile walk on the Pacific coast. Miss Warren tied her mass hair back snugly, girded up her armor and whispered that she would walk to Tiverton and back along the Boston Post Road, a distance of two [illegible] miles.

"And I'll do it," she said, "in four hours!"

Early one morning last June she started from the Casino. She wore a short white serge skirt, heavy low shoes, a Norfolk jacket of serge and a white sailor hat, band-ed with black. She looked very smart. At 8 o'clock she was swinging down Bellevue avenue past the Touro Park and Countess Annie Leary's cottage. She was in splendid form. THE BIRTH THROES OF A NEW CONTINENT.

The New Continent Will Comprise a Zone Running from Java and Southern Asia, Through the Philippine Islands and Japan, to the Aleutian Islands, Near Alaska. The Rising of This Zone May Create a Tidal Wave That Will Overwhelm the Rest of the World.

A RECENT debate before the British Association for the Advancement of Science has revealed the fact that a new continent is forming in the Pacific Ocean.

Does this process involve the end of the world, as far as the present human race is concerned?

If the creation of the new continent should proceed at all hastily it is calculated that it would raise a tidal wave of such colossal proportions that it would overwhelm all life upon the globe.

If, for instance, the emergence of new land above the ocean should proceed over a large area as hurriedly as it has already done on a small scale near the Bogoslof Islands, off Alaska, then undoubtedly a tidal wave would result which would engulf humanity.

Such a catastrophe is unknown in our brief human experience, but has occurred on our planet in past times and must occur again. As Professor Pickering, of Harvard University, says:

"To the great celestial forces, whose effects we see in daily operation in the heavens about us, not only such a result as this, but even the crushing and utter annihilation of our tiny earth would be a mere bagatelle—an affair that might be accomplished in a few seconds. Even the flash of our funeral pyre would hardly be noticed from the nearest star.

At least one similar catastrophe has already occurred on the globe according to the best scientific authorities. The centrifugal force of the earth's rotation became so violent that it cracked lengthwise, forming the Atlantic Ocean. Then on the opposite side a vast mass shot away from the moon, while its place was taken by the Pacific Ocean. The tremendous tidal waves which arose then and the terrific shock to the globe must have extinguished all human life and all higher animal life, if any such then existed, on the earth's surface.

Similarly the sudden emergence from the Pacific Ocean of the new continent now forming, as large as Australia, or even a considerable fraction of such a continent, would cause a universal catastrophe.

There is no limit to the possible height and bulk of a tidal wave. People think that there must be a limit to the height, because it would topple over; but the simple fact is that if its base is large enough it may be of any height. Base and height will be proportioned to the amount of water affected and the force that originally produced it. Displacement of a body of water having the area of a continent may create a wave many miles in height, or higher than the highest mountains, and accompanied by others only slightly less colossal.

We know that the eruption of Kilauea, in Hawaii, a relatively trivial disturbance, caused a disastrous tidal wave on the Pacific Coast, thousands of miles away. What would be the effect of a disturbance millions of times as great?

We can imagine the vast tidal wave rolling across the ocean toward the surrounding shores. Its crest is a mass of seething waters in which no shipping can live. Everything afloat is destroyed in its path. Even fish cannot live in the terrific pulverizing cauldron of waters, and the surface of the ocean is strewn with dead whales and other sea monsters whose existence was formerly only suspected.

The wave rolls over the continents, diminishing gradually in height and bulk, but retaining sufficient force to overwhelm all land surfaces. It does not merely drown all living things. It crushes them to annihilation with a greater force than nature has ever been known to exert during human history.

It is not confined to the shores of the Pacific Ocean. It passes round and over Cape Horn into the Atlantic, and it passes round the world in the opposite direction, through the Indian Ocean, past the Cape of Good Hope into the Atlantic.

Waves coming from opposite directions meet and mighty recheves result. The whole earth rocks. Its revolution upon its axis and its passage round the sun are interrupted.

There is no refuge for man beneath the earth, for the water penetrates everywhere. Dry spots are left on the top of the Himalaya Mountains, but life is impossible there.

And the new continent? Will a new creation different from man and the present animals come into existence there? That is another problem.

The area now indicated by science as likely to be the site of the new continent is bounded by the Philippine Islands, Japan, the Aleutian Islands (between Alaska and Asia) and the Islands of Southeastern Asia—Java, etc. This includes the area of greatest earthquake and volcanic activity in the world.

The British Association, which includes the leading scientists of the British Empire and meets annually, has just made public a monumental report, which shows that earthquakes are part of the process of continent building. This association is responsible for the announcement that a new continent is forming and that it may incidentally bring about the end of humanity.

Sir Archibald Geikie the leading English geographer, presented to the association a report by Professor James Milne, secretary of a committee appointed to study earthquakes. The committee has completed down to 1900 a catalogue of all the destructive earthquakes recorded in history. They date from A. D. 1 and their number more than 4,000. The record refers only to earthquakes which have been accompanied by destruction or by changes of the earth's surface or which have extended over large areas. In many instances these disturbances have resulted in adjustments in the earth's crust of geological importance. The sources from which materials have been drawn include Japanese and Chinese catalogues.

The report says that although the periods of seismic activity in Italy and Japan were separated by irregular intervals of time, the years in which there had been marked activity in one of these countries closely corresponded with the years when there had been marked activity in the other. The zone of earthquake activity where the new continent is coming into existence is over 4,000 miles long. It is sometimes called the "fire ring of the Pacific." Nearly 1,000,000 square miles of islands through this zone are now above water If only 2,000,000 more miles were added, this would give a total area larger than Australia, but it is probable that it would be much larger than that

The zone is bordered on the west and south by a rock-ribbed crescent formed by the Malay Peninsula, Sumatra, Java, Celebes and Borneo. Thence it extends by a submerged ridge northward to the Philippines Another ridge connects it with the Japanese Islands, and still another with the Kurile and the Aleutian Islands

In this zone 1,071 earthquakes were observed in twenty months This means an average of fifty-three earthquakes a month.

But between the islands mentioned ...h ... depth is comparatively trifling and is continually ...decreasing. In the sea north of Java the depth of water over the plateau is only 66 to 302 feet! In fact a continent only partly submerged already exists there

The birth of a tiny portion of this new continent has been observed, recorded and photographed by United States naval officers. It occurred near Bogoslof Island, in the Aleutian group, and was a wonderfully exciting occurrence.

Bogoslof Island has been visibly growing from 1826 to the present day. It was named after the Russian Admiral Bogoslof, in 1790, and the Americans called it at ...e time Castle Rock, because it was then a mere rock, ...esting a castle in form

...n 1906-1907 there appeared another volcanic peak on the opposite side of the island, called the McCulloch, after the United States revenue cutter which observed it. On October 15 1907, the new peak disappeared in a vast gulf of hot water

On July 7 1908 the Metcalf-Perry cone vanished and there appeared in its place a long, narrow band, joining old and new Bogoslof islands

The crew of the United States steamship Albatross were watching the islands when they saw the surface of the ocean at a particular spot rise into a domelike swelling as large as the dome of the Capitol at Washington, then subside and then rise again Before each subsidence there was a tremendous escape of gas, like a huge bubble pushing its way through the water

Then the domelike formation ceased and new and more terrific disturbances riveted the attention of the astounded watchers

Great clouds of smoke and steam issued from the surface where the bumps had been As they watched, the eruption rapidly grew in immensity until it seemed as if it would involve the whole of the ocean and the sky

The ocean boiled up as if it were lying in an immeasurable furnace A vast column of steam smoke, fire, rocks and other materials shot from the ocean up into the sky so high that the top of it could not be discerned The column was probably three miles in width It was an indescribably terrifying spectacle All the officers and men off the Albatross came tumbling on to the deck to see it

Within the smoke and other material could be discerned a vast column of flame which rose up into the sky with a roaring noise Huge boulders shot up in the flames with a report louder than that of all the twelve-inch guns on the biggest battleship firing at once The heat scorched those on the Albatross, and must have been perceptible for fifty miles around The entire ocean was heated

The column of smoke and fire changed in color It was red, yellow, blue and dark brown by turns.

How the Latest Addition to Bogoslof Island Began to Rise

The molten matter thrown up into the sky came down again in a partially cooled condition and fell into the ocean with a continuous hissing and a mighty splashing, sending forth constantly concentric hot waves of water, which rocked the Albatross violently

Ashes were scattered by the fiery pillar and fell on the ocean for miles around Doubtless they were being carried round the world, as has happened in other volcanic eruptions.

The spectacle which the officers and the crew of the Albatross were witnessing was the eruption of a submarine volcano. Somewhere beneath the ocean bed an immense mass of burning matter had gathered such force that its expansion was great enough to burst through the crust of the earth, even when weighted down by the ocean above it.

After an hour or so the watchers saw a dark-brown solid mass of irregular shape forming upon the water at the base of the fiery column That was the birth of the new volcanic peak The lava and burning earth had completely filled up the ocean from its bed hundreds of fathoms down, to the surface, and was now rising above the surface. Higher and higher it mounted, while flame, smoke and molten matter continually belched forth from its centre, the volcanic crater The matter flowed out on all sides and gradually increased the size of the island The summit of the volcano appeared to be climbing up into the sky It has since been estimated to have reached a height of 1,600 feet

Later the United States revenue cutter Perry passed the island and a party of officers and men from her landed upon the new peak, where they hoisted the American flag They found the surface of the island almost unbearably hot to walk upon, and their shoes were ruined by the expedition, but in spite of the discomfort and danger they explored it thoroughly When one of them thrust a thermometer into a crevice in the ground the mercury expanded so rapidly that it smashed the instrument to pieces

If so much disturbance was caused by the emergence of a mere speck of land from the ocean, how overwhelming would be that accompanying the creation of a continent millions of square miles in extent!

How the Moon Was Shot from the Earth.

SCIENTISTS have come to the conclusion from long accumulated observations that our satellite, the moon, was once thrown off from the earth where the Pacific Ocean now is

Professor George Howard Darwin of England, son of the great Charles Darwin, was one of the first to propound the theory that the moon was once separated from the earth and Professor William H Pickering the distinguished American astronomer has by a most ingenious series of observations shown that the Pacific Ocean was the place whence the moon started

That the moon came from the earth was first indicated by several astronomical observations The moon is slowly getting farther away from the earth The earth formerly rotated more rapidly than it does now and the moon revolved round the earth once in four or five hours instead of once in thirty days By going far enough back scientists find there was a time when the moon was always over the same part of the earth

Then they find that prior to this period the centrifugal force of the earth was so great that it was liable to crack and throw off portions of its surface The agreement of these facts leads clearly to the conclusion that the moon was shot off from the earth

Other facts indicate with equal clearness where the moon came from We have seen that the earth cracked from the violence of its centrifugal force If we look at the globe we see a long, comparatively narrow crack the Atlantic Ocean running from North Pole to South Pole The opposite shores fit quite closely to one another as the severed edges of a cracked surface would do That was where the earth first cracked

On the other side of the globe is a vast circular hole the Pacific Ocean That is where the substance of the moon was torn off away from the earth It is estimated that the separation of this mass occurred just before the moon left off

Professor Pickering has imagined exactly what took place when the moon was to part

As the part of the earth's crust near the present island of New Zealand began to rise in reference to the centrifugal force developed by the earth's rotation the crust on the opposite

Diagram Showing That the Atlantic Ocean Was Formed by the Cracking of the Earth's Crust on One Side, While the Moon Shot Off the Other.

cracked and split in two, forming the bed of the Atlantic Ocean Before the crack could widen more than two thousand miles the pull became so intense that a huge, roughly circular piece, forming nearly three-quarters of the earth's whole crust was taken out of the middle and carried away to form the moon This left a continent on each side of the Pacific

"Thus the Atlantic had was formed only a few moments before that of the Pacific, and the necessity for two chief oceans instead of one is made apparent."

If we examine the coast lines of our oceans we find that the Pacific is bounded by a nearly continuous row of volcanoes These volcanoes are usually in lines convex toward the ocean That shows where a portion of the earth's crust was torn out

The Atlantic Ocean is very different Its shores are flat and have very few volcanoes The only line of volcanoes is in the West Indies, and it is also supposed that a second piece of the earth was torn off here to join the moon This is also the only region where the opposite shores of the Atlantic Ocean do not fit closely which is accounted for by the tearing away of the crust of the earth.

The total volume of the moon is equal to the area of all the oceans on earth with a thickness of thirty-six miles It seems therefore that the earth had an entirely solid crust thirty-six miles thick and that it parted with two-thirds of this to the moon and then remained one-third land and two-thirds ocean

We owe to the moon everything that makes life pleasant on earth—our division into land and water our continents and oceans and our climate If the moon had never left us, or if she had carried away the whole of our crust, we would never have advanced beyond the stage of the present dog-fish

The crust of the earth beneath the Pacific Ocean is heavier than on the opposite side There is more mineral in it. This indicates that the earth was originally covered with the lighter crust and that the part of it now replaced by the Pacific Ocean went to form the moon This is confirmed by astronomical calculations which show that the moon has the same density as the lighter part of the earth's crust.

The most peculiar feature of the moon's landscape is the presence of vast numbers of volcanic craters They are different from most of earth's craters, because they have a hole instead of a cone in the centre It used to be thought that no terrestrial volcanoes of the lunar type existed, but recently many of them have been found. There are a number in Hawaii, and there is one in Oregon In the lunar type of volcano the lava returns through the hole in the centre of the crater

The lunar craters were formed while the moon was contracting from a liquid to a solid state.

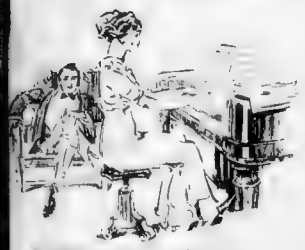
America's "Goldbricked" Wifeless Husbands

Are You One of Them? An American Writer's Bitter, Astonishing Attack Upon American Womanhood—The Vampire Woman, the Brainless Woman, the "Society-Bitten" Woman.



"It was pleasant to my ignorant ears to hear Edna playing sonatas."

DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS has written a novel, "The Husband's Story," which is the most cruelly candid expose of the social climber and her methods ever written. The book is a merciless arraignment of a selfish wife of a struggling husband, and the still more selfish wife of a multi-millionaire, who, having satisfied all her ambitions, persuades her husband to buy an earl for their daughter, and divorces her husband that she may ... Italian prince.

The author, a young and handsome bachelor, prudently remains in Europe while the wave of indignation sizzled by his new book breaks in his own country. Has he depicted in Edna merely an isolated case, or has he shown a type common in this country? Indignant American women have declared that Edna is a monster, a Frankenstein of the author's creation. Cool critics of American women declare the picture is not overdrawn. The reader may draw his own conclusions from the excerpts from the book that follow which are reproduced here by permission of the publishers, D. Appleton & Company.

From "The Husband's Story," by David Graham Phillips.

(Copyright, 1910, by D. Appleton & Co.)

"How can I hope to make nice friends when I've a husband with broken finger nails?"

"How can you be so ignorant of the world?' cried Edna in a frenzy."

"I accompanied her to the Plaza."

"'All the ladies tell me you're honest'."

"To be sure," said I. "But one may also be able to love a duke."

"I never heard of a girl who would love a duke if she got the chance," said Edna.

"I've no objection to titles," said I. "In fact, I think Margot will be happier if she marries a title. You've educated her so well that she'll never see the man or think of him."

"How little you know her!" cried Edna, pathetically. "And how unjust to me your prejudices make you. I've brought her up to be all refinement all sentiment—all heart. She looks only at the highest and best."

"At the duke, also I."

"Certainly at the duke," said she. "Her tastes are for the life where a woman can show her beauty of soul to the best advantage and can do the most good. There is no career for a woman in America."

"You must help me, Godfrey," said Edna, after a strained silence. "Margot is wretched, and a dreadful scandal may break out in time. Already people are talking. Margot is ashamed to show herself in public. She thinks everyone is laughing at her."

"No doubt she's right," said I. "A woman who loses her husband on the honeymoon is likely to be laughed at. What did she do?"

"Why do you persist in saying that?" cried she, so irritated that she could not altogether restrain herself. "Your dislike of women has become a mania with you."

"But I don't dislike them," replied I. "On the contrary I like them—like them so well that their worthlessness angers me like the treachery of a friend. And I believe so much in their power that, when things go wrong, I blame them. They have dominion over the men and over the children. And whenever they use their power it is to make fools of the men and weaklings of the children. I don't know which is the worse influence—the wishy-washy, unpractical, preacher morality of the good woman or the lazy, idle, irresponsible dissipation of the—the ladies and near-ladies and lady-climbers and lady-imitators."

"Yes, it was a great day, and as I accompanied her in the auto to the Plaza, I felt dowdy and insignificant—felt like an humble male menial, courier or valet.

"I did not fully appreciate your magnificence," said I, "until I saw you on these humble shores."

"It is shocking here—isn't it?" said she. "So incomplete, so crude. No wonder the ideas are low. The surroundings give no inspiration."

You are still smiling mockingly. But let me tell you a few secrets of wisdom and happiness. First—Friendship is divine, but intimacy is the devil himself—unless it is the intimacy of the family. Second—Try love your neighbor as yourself, he must be and must remain your neighbor, that is to say, within hail, but not within touch.

Third—Husband, wife and children are the only natural intimates—intimate because they have the bond of common interest. The family that looks abroad for intimates has ceased to be a family. Finally—a man who has his wife and children for intimates has neither need nor time for other intimates; and unless a man's wife and children are his intimates, he has, in fact, no wife and no children.

Very Newest Furs.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile").

NEVER were furs more beautiful than this year, and never were they more artistic and—copious!

A man can never fully realise how much fur really mean to a woman—no, not even when he pays the bill and must fully realise how much they mean to him.

But to a woman they always mean the most becoming of all frames for face and figure, and a pleasing consciousness of supreme charm as well as comfort; while this season even the most familiar furs have acquired a new and irresistible fascination, owing to any number of ingenious and decorative devices, both in the way of modelling of the wraps and garments and manipulation of the skins.

But woman has also this year grown independent of her furs. Some of the most charming stoles and muffs are being made of velvets, plushes and fine silks.

Here I show you a sketch of one of the greatest novelties in this line. The stole is made of black velour, with revers of white satin enriched by motifs of gold upon moussaline de soie of old blue. At the ends are trimmings of black passementerie de soie.

All the muff decorations are carried out in the same way. The handbag (new-est-shaped) hanging low from the waist, is black velvet with gold embellishments.

Finishing the costume is a velvet umbrella! And this is also quite the newest thing. It is lined with white satin, the handle is covered with crystals, the covering is a soft black velvet. These umbrellas or parasols come in every shape and color of velvet, and match the wraps. Usually the hat is in a fabric of the same kind and of the same or contrasting color.

But, getting back to the newest furs:

The new stoles are for the most part made in two different furs, and where one only is used, diversity and decorativeness of effect are secured by the wearing of the skins in different directions, the pile alternately going upward and downward, so that a striped pattern, either plain or Variety Red, is shown more or less distinctly on the soft shaded surface also of seal musquash and red caracul. The modest mole skin and the costly chinchilla. Then further to proclaim their novelty, these stoles will be lined with Paisley or cashmere patterned crepe de chine whose soft fulness is held in by rows of shirring and finished off at the edge with pretty little scrolls and various devices wrought in cordings or featherings of the same fabric while, if plain fabric be preferred, chiffon moire certainly takes precedence of satin this season. Outwardly too, deep fringes or lace braid are often introduced as a border, for the scalloped or curved or slanting ends of the stole, though personally I think a more permanently satisfactory effect can be secured by relying on the aforementioned contrast of furs.

Seal musquash and kid caracul look exceedingly well together, for example, as do also seal musquash and skunk. The latter fur, in fact, being used in conjunction with almost every other, and by its effective contrast of texture and tone increasing the original beauty alike of chinchilla, caracul and squirrel.

Opossum is a more recent addition to the list of furs provided by fashion, and though I think that it shows more than a suspicion of clumsiness when used alone as a complete stole and muff, it is distinctly decorative when figuring as a finish for a coat of darker fur.

But the fur stole to be really graceful must be sufficiently soft and supple to adapt itself to any desired scheme of draping about the figure, and so for this reason I would only recommend the first mentioned furs for the purpose, and perhaps give special preference to seal musquash, bordered with skunk or black fox. While then again, a union between ermine and black fox must be accounted distinctly happy and successful.

And while the fur stole has grown larger and wider, the muffs, in their turn, has correspondingly increased in size and beauty, and are now absolutely gigantic. The contrast between their width and the extreme slenderness of our figures and frocks being distinctly piquant. The flat pillow shape is the one which is most generally shown and demanded, but others again are curved into something of the outlines of a heart, while then some, too, contrast their straight line on the top with a deeply slanting border, which on one side reaches a depth of as thirty inches, and at the other a lower of fourteen-inch measurement. Perhaps, too, a double series of scallops will all be bordered with a contrasting fur with the same device, always, of course, being repeated on the stole, while in ways, too, it is noteworthy that in order to insure the flat effect which is so fashionable, and in the mings in the way of heads and raws have been almost entirely dispensed with.

And even on the furry wraps the favorite color contrast of sapphire and royal blue is often introduced, sometimes, by way of an inner lining of crepe de chine or union of moire or else outwardly in the form of trimmings, though these truly demand the most careful treatment if they are to be really artistic and not merely assertive. For example, a great cape and muff of ermine will be set off by linings of sapphire blue satin and by pendant ornaments formed of [illegible] interwoven cords of black and white silk, terminating in tassels to match, while [illegible] again on a set of fairies seeming to put in an appearance, peering out bordered with black fox, [illegible] muffs in black and white satin [illegible] centred with vivid blue, will put in a distinctly decorative appearance [illegible] such a muff being set [illegible] one side of the stole for fastening while [illegible] another is posed on the muff, but at the other side.

Some stoles there are, too, which are of such width and shaping that they are veritable wraps. The arms being passed through slits shaped openings at the sides, while still another novelty forms a positive cape at the back before narrowing into long stole ends. This is of most picturesque effect when the cape is so adjusted that it falls over the left shoulder, the ends being then crossed over the right shoulder and falling almost to the knees, both at the back and in the front, where double tassels of silk and cord bring their career to a most effective close.

But, the meeting of extremes being more noteworthy in the modes of this season than ever before, there must also be [illegible] to which are set the fine fashions some [illegible] of black fox, [illegible] around the throat, [illegible] are permitted [illegible] to put in appearance, peering out [illegible] wearer's left ear [illegible] plans and finish.

[illegible] In order that even [illegible] may carry out [illegible] some [illegible] of each toilette, [illegible] are [illegible] pendants are [illegible] the transparent circlet of [illegible] wrought more or [illegible] diamonds, is de- [illegible] background of colored [illegible] with each pendant several [illegible] will be provided— [illegible] one in soft jade or brilliant [illegible] green. The idea is such a good one, and is, moreover, such pleasantly convincing proof of the increasing attention to even the little details of one's attire, that I make no apology for dressing somewhat from the subject under discussion in order to make it known to you.

"A face locked up for the night before retiring."

By Lina Cavalieri

ONE of Mme. Cavalieri's discoveries of the methods of preserving and cultivating beauty in Europe is explained in detail to-day in a most interesting article on "Locking Up the Face for the Night." Mme. Cavalieri says the method should be adopted now and then by every woman who is over thirty. The article is so well illustrated that the pictures almost tell the story.

Next week Mme. Cavalieri will write on "Walking as a Beautifier."

ever if informed by you through the columns of this paper how blackheads can be removed from the face. I also know as a fact that they generally turn into pimples. Would you also be kind enough to inform me how to avoid these blackheads, for they make one very unsightly. My friends would also be very grateful to you."

My dear young reader, the way to prevent blackheads is by absolute cleanliness of the skin. When you come in from a walk put cold cream on the face. Leave it on long enough to collect the dust that your skin has gathered up on the walk, then remove both dust and cream with absorbent cotton.

Be careful when you have been out to a theatre or dance, or to any evening party, to remove every particle of powder from the face in the same way blackheads do not collect in clean, naturally working pores.

But since you have acquired some I can but repeat once more my former directions, adding others in case you prefer them, or they are more convenient. I have again and again recommended bathing the part of the face afflicted with blackheads—usually it is the nose—with green soap. Use a flesh brush and scrub that part of the face briskly. Rinse the face with cool water and if any of the blackheads remain press them gently out with a watchkey or one of the vulgarly called "pimple presses" that may be bought at most chemist's shops. That is if the blackheads are large. If small it is sufficient to simply dip the match or a wooden toothpick in ammonia and bleach them from black to white.

A reader often used is to mix an old sock or linen handkerchief in alcohol, 1 oz.; water, 1 oz., and one by one press them out.

An Atlantic City reader asks me for a remedy for an obstinate case of yellow freckles. In my mail I find a warm recommendation of the following:

Epsom salts, 1 heaping teaspoonful. Water, 2 tablespoonfuls.

Dissolve the salts in the water. Apply the lotion to the freckles before retiring.

This is a good lock-up at night for the face that has a withered looking, relaxed skin:

Rose water, 3 ozs.
Sweet almond oil, 1½ ozs.
Sulphate of aluminium, 15 grains.
Tincture of quinquina, 30 minims.

While locking up the face, look out all unpleasant thoughts from the mind. For the unconscious as well as the conscious thoughts write themselves upon the face.

"I am a young lady of seventeen," writes a New York correspondent, "and would be more grateful than

The crow's feet, those lines that form the fan-like corners of the eyes, also require special treatment. If the wrinkles there formed by laughter are diagonal the strips of courtplaster are arranged cross-wise, first stretching them across the skin by holding it as I have described. If, as occasionally happens, the lines formed by laughter reach well down into the cheeks, the strips of courtplaster should be carved inward toward the nose.

The effect of these cell bars on the face is indescribably funny. It is a [illegible] woman or a [illegible] friend, as is [illegible] who will reveal herself to any one [illegible] looks thus. But it is an admirable means of holding up lazy or tired muscles and preventing unconscious deepening of lines.

Before locking up the face this astringent lotion may be applied with a sponge or absorbent cotton to tighten up the flaccid skin.

Rose water	3 ozs.
Elder flower water	3 ozs.
Tannic acid	5 grains.
Simple tincture of benzoin	¼ oz.

This face cream has a similar effect, at the same time feeding the dry or relaxed skin:

Lanolin	45 grams.
Oil of sweet almonds	30 grams.
Tannin	¾ grams.

This can be made at home by heating the oil of almonds and the lanolin in a double boiler, then stirring in the tannin thoroughly while the mixture cools.

LIGHTING LAMPS IN BLIND EYES

This Is What the Blind Babies Are to Be Saved from.

How the Little Sightless Children Are Being Taught to Be Self Supporting to Save Them from the Horrors of Beggary.

ONE of the most unique institutions in the country is the public school kindergarten for blind babies, located in the Bay Ridge Heights section of Brooklyn, N. Y.

It has just been reopened for the winter the same as the other schools, and its unfortunate little pupils resume the line of march schoolward less reluctantly perhaps, than those who, lacking, the imaginative and blessed with sight, find a thousand and one things to allure them on their way. For the blind children, there is no stampling in inviting puddles to see them take nearly six months. But how far they will stop, no games of once the light marbles or of mumbledy peg, no lingering or loitering to watch fallen they begin to feel out. With the horses or other daily mishaps of the streeching forth of low American to streets, and, as a matter of fact, they ward life, despite the handicap, incenare only too anxious to reach their tive slowly appears destination and cheerfully follow their ling. Raw materia conductors who lead them gently by a useful citizen is then promoted to the next hand schools rather than another dependent being p aced on Government support.

The essential and most difficult thing in kindergarten work for blind babies is their awakening. Almost every child blind from birth, it has been noted, sinks into a state of apathy from which it is very nearly impossible to arouse him. The enormous incentive sight gives the normal child, is entirely lacking. Upon the imaginative and illustrative ability of the teacher depends greatly the success of her endeavors in their interior [illegible]. To arouse them takes usually six months. But once the light [illegible] steadily, apathy fades, in most strangleton and the clause appears asking what prevention of blindness in the eye of a new-born infant, would save the sight, as will be followed, in example, by other per and printed directions are enclosed. soon as the signs of irritation and infection appeared. Teaching the Blind the Piano.

It is a curious fact that, though they may never have known what it is to see, and children use the term as easily and freely as are normal persons. The sense of nearness, developed to an abnormal degree of acuteness, is doing the duty for them and struggles to rise up to the plane wherein it is handicapped, by being deprived of the communication of sight. "See the people coming up the Ogpa!" they cry, as the sound of alien feet tells them that a stranger is within their gates. When, as sometimes happens, the stranger has a name, and the children learn of it, there is great excitement.

"See the lady fix the camera!" they say to each other. They feel that something unusual is at hand, and, like normal children of the same age, are alert with excitement of it.

The first work of the day at the blind school is usually the building of "the fence." This consists of some twenty-eight blocks, all of which rest on two uprights blocks of the same size and dimension as the others. With greater accuracy than often characterizes the work of people with sight, each block was placed, and the smiles broadened on the faces as it became evident that the work of their tiny hands was not going to prove a miniature Tower of Pisa, but that the entire and wonderful picture was going to stand, perfect in line, on its foundation of two small blocks.

The next thing they are called upon to do is the making of chains, the same as is done in any kindergarten, fashioned of different colored pieces of paper. Strange to say, Amy's favorite color is blue, while Helen prefers pink, and Jimmy, the one representative of darkest Africa, clings with the love of his race for warm and brilliant hues, to red.

The "Light-Bird" is the favorite game of those babies, who live in a world of their own, all inside their curly heads. This consists of a prism, hung by a piece of ribbon to the window shade, and through which the sun shines, casting many-hued shadows about the walls, floor and ceiling. The fragment of glass, with its power to hold and throw color, has, of course, all been described to them.

One of the most interesting games which the children play is that called "Reading Faces." There are several plaster busts in the kindergarten room, including one of Abraham Lincoln and one of William McKinley. Little David is given the Lincoln bust. Slowly the little hands start at the base and creep up over the face. He is very serious at first, as he knows he is expected to tell whose face it is he is reading, and he has [illegible] made a mistake. The baby fingers pass lightly over the eyes and brow and pause on the mouth, as though lingering an instant for a tardy caress. Then, a quick, radiating smile glows on the little [illegible] face, as he turns to where the teacher stands. "It's Abraham Linkun," he [illegible].

Mrs. Cynthia M. Treanor, a graduate trained nurse, and Mrs. Cynthia W. Alden, both of New York, are responsible for the establishment of this school.

"They said it would take ten years to establish such a school," said Mrs. Alden, "and I replied that if that was the case it was time we got at it. Many of these children are blind necessarily, but when you realize that a large per cent of blind children are so unnecessarily and from birth, it seems we owe them an extra debt to shake them out of the apathy which possesses them, and at least start them on the road to usefulness."

This reference to children who are blind unnecessarily was sufficiently interesting to justify further inquiry. It led to a report of the New York State Association for the Relief of Ophthalmia Neonatorum, in which the subject—that of the ophthalmia which is so needlessly [illegible] of the 5,000 blind in the State of New York, over a quarter might have had their eyesight.

According to Dr. Hubbell, of the Prevention Committee of the New York Association, this means that these children, in the majority of cases, were blinded shortly after birth through an infectious disease known as ophthalmia, and that owing to ignorance, neglect or wrong treatment their sight was shattered. In each instance one or two drops of a 1 per cent solution of nitrate of silver would between them and perpetual blindness.

Physicians have known, ever since the Crede discovery in 1883, that the nitrate of silver solution in the eye of a new-

This is an unprecedented and liberal offer that you can't afford to overlook. You need a Dictionary in your home or your office—not a big, clumsy volume, but a dainty, handy book that will contain not merely a few words, but all the words that the larger sized and heavy Dictionary contains. You can get this dictionary free by complying with conditions set forth below.

This new dictionary is just the very thing—light weight, small, bound in flexible leather; contains 1,224 pages of Oxford Bible paper that is very thin but very opaque, and it is not abridged.

The only dictionaries with which this can be fairly compared are the unabridged editions of older dictionaries—the one so widely advertised at sold by subscription—and these range in price fromten to fifty dollars, according to the binding.

We commend this book to those who want a strictly reliable dictionary, full of most from cover to cover. We state positively that there can not be found elsewhere in the world a dictionary of the English language of the same size that defines as many words, or contains as many pages and as much information as this one does. If any person possessed a vocabulary of as many words as can be found on a fraction of the pages in this book, he would have a command of language greater than that of Shakespeare.

The accuracy, reliability and excellence of this work have been secured because it was prepared with unremitting care under the supervision and close personal attention of Thomas H. Russell, LL.B., Editor-in-Chief.

I AM VERY MUCH ASHAMED OF MYSELF

RESOLVED

THAT POOR GRANDPA IS ONE OF THOSE WHO HAVE NOTHING ON THEIR MINDS BUT THEIR HATS. HE ONLY USES HIS HEAD FOR A HAT RACK. IF HE USED HIS MIND HE WOULD KNOW THAT HIS CROSS DISPOSITION IS WHAT IS RESPONSIBLE FOR HIS TROUBLES. THE WORLD IS ALL RIGHT. IT IS LIKE A MIRROR, IF YOU JUST SMILE AT IT, IT SMILES BACK. IF YOU SCOWL AT PEOPLE THEY SCOWL BACK AT YOU. YOU KNOW THAT. IF YOU HAVE A GROUCH SHAKE IT. SUCCESSFUL MERCHANTS, SALESMEN, HOTEL KEEPERS OR INDEED SUCCESSFUL ANYTHING MUST LOOK HAPPY AND BE HAPPY. IT'S JUST AS EASY AND IT LIGHTENS THE LOAD. CHEER UP.
